EFFECT—The State College name-change argument is, like politics, making strange bedfellows.

In the Legislature, you have liberals, Democrats, and Republicans. But who you are, what you are, how you vote, and how you stand, won't make any difference in the final vote on the whinging. How will it all end?

The battle has turned legislators from anti-Sanfordists into lovers of the Governor. On the other hand, the hassle has lost some solid administration support.

In brief, the State College ister in Secretary of State Thad Eure's big book as a lobbyist.

The list is long—and they are good men—but, alas, all are lobbyists. However, the most effective lobbyists here are, year-in-year-out, State employees. Their departments want this or that bill to pass or fail. They go after it, hammer-and-tongs. But they never register as lobbyists.

Edward Breeden Clark of Elizabethtown, a former State Senator, moves quietly among the legislators. The administration's way is his road. His bivouac is built of blooming bills. And, believe it or not, he doesn't walk. He tiptoes! You don't hear him coming. You look up—and there he is!

"I wish he would start wearing regular shoes," said a legislator last week, "so I could hear him approaching."

What he meant was that Liason Man Clark wears these ultra-modern hush-puppy shoes. They have crepe soles and make less noise than a heavy fog. Anti-administration with their plans down—on several occasions.

Right now, Edward Breeden Clark, 47 last January, is up to his neck in cows and commas—for the administration and Greater University of North Carolina. His salary? Better than four times that of a legislator.

TIME IT TAKES—If you plan to come to Raleigh to visit the State House as who doesn't who hasn't—you want to figure on the time required for the tour.

It may take longer for you—but the allotted time recommended by the supervisors is 20 minutes. But, remember, space and glass look alike.

CONTROL—The Legislature says you must have seat belts on any new car you buy after January 1, 1964.

You don't have to fasten them—but they are better that way. And the buckles are terrible things to sit on.

William M. Bryant of Raleigh reports in the current issue of Reader's Digest that one of his friends involved in a minor auto accident admitted it was all his fault.

The friend, reports Bryant, explained that after he had pulled out of his driveway onto the street it dawned on him that he had forgotten something.

"So," he said, "I took my hands off the wheel to fasten my seat belt—and lost control of the car."

KNEE-DEEP?—What is so rare as a day in June—if with it comes adjournment of Legislature?

The Raleigh News & Observer, no stranger to legislative lethargy, got out its whip last week and gave the boys a larrup, hinted at a "do-nothing Legislature", and urged them onward.

But the Legislature, slowed by controversy, was moving like molasses in midwinter. Where two weeks ago there was talk of adjournment on June 1, now came bets of June 15—a scant two weeks short of money-short '61. But this session has worries which did not plague its predecessor.

Ballet Guild To Present Music And Dancers

An unusually interesting concert will be presented on Tuesday, May 14, 8:30 P.M. at Lee Edwards High School auditorium sponsored by the Asheville Ballet Guild and presenting the Asheville Ballet company and the Asheville Symphony orchestra.

The dancers will interpret music in the current season's repertoire of the orchestra. Choreography is the original work of artistic director Mrs. Mountain and James Wilson of Lawton, Okla., two brothers, William and Dallas Lanning of Old Fort; two sisters, Mrs. Rose Staton of Old Fort and Mrs. Glenn Lunsford of Washington, D. C.; 37 grandchildren; 36 great-grandchildren; the stepmother, Mrs. Fattie Lanning of Old Fort; and a halfbrother, Paul Lanning of Old Fort.

The body was taken Sunday at 2:30 P.M. to the home of a daughter, Mrs. Ernest Allison, to await the service hour. McCall's Funeral home was in charge of arrangements.
