Edith K. Benedict

When Edith, Bill and Allan Holcombe moved into the North Fork section they had the idea of pioneering, but this summer Allan has revived an art known better to those men who formerly settled the valley than to those presently there. This is the art of splitting with axe and wedge.

This summer the youngest Holcombe has split some 360 rails for use in beautifying the yards of at least two homes, theirs and one other. These rails were split from whatever wood was available, which unfortunately happened to be oak. Now oak is tough, and some types are tougher than others, in fact, downright ornery and may not want to fall into nice even grain lines which yield rails of symmetrical beauty.

Perhaps this may not become a favorite pastime for the summer but at least Allan has a home fenced in with one of the rarest of barriers made with his own hands.

Over the week end we were at Mt. Mitchell late in the day with a picnic supper; while we stood around the campfire, alternately warming our hands and putting the food on the table, the girls hiked off into the woods on a short foray.

They will remember, for all their lives probably, the thrill of seeing four deer feeding off the wood sorrel which grows so abundantly beneath the balsams. Either the animals have been led to trust man because they are protected in this area or the sight of two persons is an accepted part of their routine. Whatever the cause the girls were near enough to one of them to stroke his back briefly. They wandered farther and came upon a mother deer and her fawn, still spotted with his baby markings. The fourth was maybe a yearling since the markings were still distinguishable, but faint. What wonderful places our parks are if we but take the time to explore them and keep our eyes open.

Who Was Chickens? One hears of tales of poor sportsmanship here and there at athletic contests, but it was a little more than shocking to hear Owen spectators being called "chicken" and other names a trifle less en- dearing, by the visitors following Friday night's game. There was nothing even slightly resembling the behavior of a chicken on the part of either Owen's players or their spectators. If ever boys played their hearts out the Warriors did—but this is Don Shuman's field. The bleachers in which we were located came more nearly resembling a bee hive in that during the entire game there was a steady procession of young people, mostly girls, back and forth. I began to think that three-fourths of the female population was either lost or had lost someone else. I presume that the object of going to the game isn't always to see the playing on the field, that on the sidelines becomes pretty interesting when two young fellows begin slugging it out with their rolled programs.

Every Day Pick-Up The information that the town garbage truck is doing every day pick up service wherever it is needed in the downtown section is good news. This is relieving a situation that until a few months ago was causing unhappiness to several people.

This goes to show that, given time, and presentation of the problem to the right people, namely those who can solve it, we can whip most of our headaches. Credit for this move is due R. T. Greene, who with some rearranging of routes and rescheduling of time, brought about the improvement.

We may never have a perfect town. I hope not, for then what would there be to work on, but there were a few interested residents at the town board meeting of last week. There will be more as time goes on (this was a call meeting of that postponed from last month); regular meeting for this month is due Wednesday, the 18th which is next week.

Members of the board have tried to make it clear that anyone is welcome to hear the proceedings. It might make for more stimulating meetings if there were more interest shown by residents.

Trivia Jim Stakias began his new job this week in the A&P store adjacent to the highway patrol station at Haw Creek—his family will continue to live here where his two children are in school and Jim will commute—his replacement is Mr. Gee which is an unusual name around here—and we said as much to Mr. S. Jim came back with "it hasn't been easy with one like Stakias." Actually Gee is easier and already can be spelled while only recently have we mastered the spelling of Stakias—best wishes to both young men—this is the week of the opening of Archie Wolf's new hardware store in the building formerly occupied by the Brandons and speaking of Ruth and Larry, they are still vitally interested in Black Mountain although they are now in the shopping center—be sure to get that contribution in to Operation Youth, Inc., remember industry likes to give us a helping hand, but they first like to see how much we like to help ourselves.

Mosses Marvel, seen on the front page, was so named by Mr. Usher, who had already seen the fruit—enjoy these fall vegetables because the fall insects foretell of the time in the not too distant future when the first frost will end all these good eats for another year.

News and Comments from our
Raleigh Bureau - 265 Overt Rd.

BATTLE—One of Charlotte's wealthiest and most influential business men told friends in Raleigh flat-footedly last Friday that GOP Congressman Charles Jonas will not be a candidate for Governor next year.

"He means too much to us in Washington. If he should give up his place as our Representative and become Governor, his strength would be wasted on a Democratic Legislature. There would be a constant battle between the Republican executive branch and the Democratic legislative branch of government," said this big supporter of Charles Jonas.

"And that is assuming he should win out—and that is no sure thing," he added. The Jonas strength is in wealthy, populous Mecklenburg County; and it is apparent the Republicans there are determined to keep their man in Washington.

So, look for a battle soon among the rank-and-file Republicans who view Jonas as their only chance to see inside the Mansion and the New Breed in Queen City. Which side will win? THE GOAT—A more or less organized effort to convince Bert Bennett of Winston-Salem that he can't be elected Governor in 1964 has been under way since he suddenly resigned from the chairmanship of the State Democratic Executive Committee.

That's the word we get—and it adds up. What gives anyway? There seems to be a lot of political amateurism in the air. For instance, the Winston-Salem Journal last Thursday ran an article as long as your leg promoting one Ralph M. Stockton, Jr., of that city as the man to succeed L. Richardson Preyer of Greensboro if Preyer gives up the Federal judgeship to which he was appointed by President Kennedy in 1961) to run for the Democratic nomination for Governor. It is rumored that Bennett, also of Winston-Salem, would not run. Wow! Meantime, a petition circulates in Guilford, which went solidly Republican a short while back urging Mr. Preyer to run for Governor. And the would-be candidate has taken to heart this encouragement.

If this is a fair sampling of political know-how in the big counties, it's no wonder to us they are swinging Republican. Pretty raw, to say the least. From here, it looks as if Bert Bennett is being made the goat—of any unpopular Democratic Party may have run into because of forthright stands on a number of important issues of the day. FAST—With Dan Moore of Canton announcing for Governor, and Dr. Henry Jordan deciding not to run, a candidate announcing from Hillsboro, and Preyer giving it prayer, things have moved fast with fall. Even though acknowledging that Judge Moore made a mistake in announcing so early, Raleigh prophets were predicting that Bennett and Preyer would have definite statements of yea or nay very, very soon.
