Sidewalk Art Took The Show For Two Days

Beautiful clear mountain weather combined with enthusiasm of both artists and viewers to produce one of the finest sidewalk art shows ever presented in the Valley.

Sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce, the show attracted crowds during both days of showing. Merchants were pleased by the large numbers of persons who visited their stores during the two day show.

Over 270 paintings were exhibited in a wide variety of media. Artists varied in age from Mrs. Martha Buckner's kindergarten ages on up to well, just on up. Numbers contributed by artists varied from one to several and the exact number of artists to show was somewhere between 50-75.

Many of the finger paintings and water colors done by the children showed promise for their future and several were sold, to the surprise of the children themselves. Also several of those done by the more experienced were sold and a few of the recipients were planning to donate a majority if not all of their profit to the library fund.

Chairman responsible for the show were loud in their thanks to merchants who gave them help and to the Chamber of Commerce for sponsoring the event.

Mrs. Jerr Fields, the portrait artist, was kept busy both days with her pastels as she skillfully caught the expression of her subjects.

The art committee expressed a belief that the standard of work had improved as compared with former shows and many "sidewalk critics" agreed with this decision.

Historic Past Recalled For Kiwanians

When a pinch-hitter comes thru with a hit he is applauded. Although it was not baseball, William McMurray was the substitute speaker at the August 5 meeting of the Kiwanis Club of Black Mountain-Swannanoa and was applauded.

His rapid fire delivery had all gasping for air as he commented on the history of Black Mountain and Swannanoa valley. He stated that the first settler in this Cherokee area was killed. Land at one time sold for five cents an acre. The advent of the stage coach introduced a new outlook. As people poured into this area tourist inns and more homes sprang into existence. When the railroad made its debut, steamer trunks and luggage used to pile up to such an extent that it took all day to deliver them. After World War I there was a boom in real estate. Mr. McMurray told of the coming of the various assemblies and their influence on the community. He spoke briefly on beauty of our mountains and valleys, fishing spots, hiking trails and scenic roads. He noted one sad fact that the last wild turkey around here was shot in 1903.

When Mr. McMurray collapsed from his own exertion, he had stirred up so many memories that the meeting lasted another ten minutes. Subjects covered during that time were swimming holes, flowers, Indian trails, bear grass (which according to "Hugh" White is neither a bear nor a grass but a lily), the wondrous train ride from Black Mountain to Old Fort. Mr. McMurray reserved his greatest sentiment for our mountains and rightly so as

RARE BIRD SEEN IN VALLEY SKY

Latest thrill for bird watchers is the sight of a swallow tail kite glimpsed Sunday afternoon by E. M. Hoffman and friends from the neighborhood of Last Resort. The kite was soaring on the wind current and although clearly visible with the naked eye the members of the group also viewed the bird through binoculars.

Although the swallow-tail kite is rare in this part of the South, bird books state that they are occasional visitors to this area. Since this visitor Sunday was identified beyond any doubt it must be that the group was treated to one of the rare visits by a transient kite.

AARP CANCELS MEETING IN FAVOR OF LIBRARY FAIR

The members of the AARP at their last session voted unanimously to forego their regular meeting on Friday the thirteenth so that each member might be free to attend the Library Fair at their leisure.

This was done in recognition of the fact that some of their members are active in the organization of the fair. It was also realized that the Library Fair is a really worthwhile event benefiting a major community project, the Black Mountain Library Building Fund.

Education depends on the dissemination of knowledge and one means is a good library—a place truly for the young and the not so young.
