It was fitting that the opening prayer led by Dr. Gaines Cook at the February 12th meeting of the Black Mountain - Swannanoa formerly of Black Mountain, Kiwanis Club was in remembrance of Abraham Lincoln. who died Friday, Feb. 13 were

"Our Father, we thank Thee today for the life of Abraham Lincoln and his contribution to our nation. We thank Thee for all loyal citizens who have made us a great nation. During this Bicentennial Year we are aware of our responsibilities as citizens. As Kiwanians we are greatful for an International organization which seeks to live according to the ideals of citizenship and service. Today, on Lincoln's birthday, we dedicate ourselves anew to our country."

Guy White introduced the speaker, Dr. John Crawford who lives in Black Mountain with his wife and four children. Under pressure, he admits that all of the latter are honor students. It strikes us that some of the intelligence must have rubbed off from Mother and Father, Dr. Crawford is a world traveler, author and educator with an earned doctorate in Philosophy at the University of Aberdeen in Scotland. He is currently a professor in History and Economics at Montreat - Anderson College. His, was a Bicentennial program on 200 Years of American Money. With the use of photographic slides Dr. Crawford covered Colonial coins, the stages of coin development, odd bills, American gold coins and commemoratives and Modern American coins.

Dr. Crawford is President of the Asheville Coin Club and knows more than can be reported here. We learned that there was a mixture of coins in the Colonies with the first being some that were intended for Ireland but not wanted there, were shipped to America. The early large coins of silver were often cut into sections by pirates - hence the expression "8 bits". American coins were of various sizes and in different amounts. There were cents but never pennies. The designs of American coins have not been too imaginative and many did not stay in circulation very long. The coins, however, were solid and the designs gave a sense of age and growth. (This was probably good for a developing country.). The first paper bill was really an interest bearing note - say for 6 years. The first minted coin came from silver plate given by Martha Washington. Designs often repeat the theme of Liberty with the female head or form, the eagle, stars with one for each state before there were too many. The familiar Indian head is not that of an Indian but that of the daughter of the coin

Rotary Felloe

Robert Shepherd, Executive Director of "Land-of-Sky Regional Council", talked with Rotarians and their guests about "Local people solving their own problems." He coordinates the concerns and planning of the seventeen governmental units that are represented - the four counties of Buncombe, Henderson, Madison and Transylvania and their thirteen cities - towns. Each has an official representative on the Council.

The Council's concerns are: Land use, water quality, water system development, transportation, downtown revitalization, and housing. It coordinates development in any of these areas so that the entire region is benefitted instead of only one small segment. Careful planning is a must in order to accomplish this kind of mutual help and growth. We cannot rely on haphazard growth, for now our area is receiving population and probably will be growing much faster in a few years.

Our most recent program featured Mrs. Ted Noss of Warren Wilson, speaking on the Open School concept. If registrations pany, and a member of St. Servicemen opened at the former Carter School in Black Mountain late this James Episcopal Church, Servicemen

Mrs. Noss has spent most of her teaching life in open schools. It varies from the traditional school room in having the teacher more of a resource person to help students in their studies. She counsels with them either in groups or with individuals who need special help in learning. The student learns and advances at his or her own pace. In both the traditional classroom as well as in the open classroom, the teacher is always the key person. In the traditional program, the teacher directs the class and all students must progress at that pace. Far from being chaotic, the welltrained teacher provides the open classroom students the kind of encouragement and guidance that keeps them challenged and
