BY Jean Abbott (ABCCM-east) has announced that Vance Avenue Baptist and Lahey Gap Presbyterian have become the latest member churches of this organization.

With the help of fifteen dependable volunteer drivers, 21 Meals-On-Wheels continue to be delivered every weekday to people unable to leave their homes due to physical handicaps. Without this program these people would have no hot meals. Miss Gertrud Rath coordinates this program. During the course of the Meals-On-Wheels service one family's other urgent needs were partially met when a wood-burning stove plus a supply of wood, some furniture and bedding were contributed by volunteers.

Presently, ABCCM-east is arranging transportation to the Asheville Kidney Center for a local man who needs kidney dialysis three times a week. He has transportation to the center. ABCCM-east supplies help to bring him back to Black Mountain on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 12:30 p.m. Anyone willing to return him to his home on anyone of those days, please phone 669-9494 two days in advance. Report of other services rendered by ABCCM-east during August and September are: Requests filled for clothing - 66; food - 21; furniture, household items - 13; prescriptions filled - 2; transportation - 8; clothing for ARC patients - 43; home visits - 2; CPL deposit - 1; help with rent - 5; and counseling - 9.

Miller FUNERAL HOME

Dear friends,

Most cemetery regulations now require the use of a burial vault, which serves not only to protect the casket and mortal remains, but to facilitate the perpetual care in cemetery maintenance.

The selection of a burial vault is usually made with the casket selection and likewise, a wide selection in various cost ranges is available.

Respectfully,
Bob Miller

BANKING IS EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS

Beware Of Bunco--Don't Get Bilked

By Willis W. Alexander
Executive Vice President
American Bankers Association

How can it happen again and again? Confidence artists have been around for centuries. Yet the headlines go on - Woman Loses $3,500, Elderly Pensioner Loses Life Savings, Couple Bilked Shopper for $2,200.

Authorities have found that two very human failings contribute heavily to victimization by fraud. They are gullibility and greed. Too many people, they say, are attracted by easy money schemes, and the desire for unearned wealth leads to an uncritical acceptance of such proposals.

For your own protection, you should know that there are no really new swindles, only new variations on old themes. One of the most famous is the "bank examiner" swindle. It's put into operation by a person claiming to be a bank examiner who needs help in catching a dishonest teller.

To cooperate with the examiner, the victim is asked to withdraw from his savings account a large amount of money, which will be "marked" and checked against the teller's records. The con artist promises to return the cash to the bank, but instead takes off with it.

Don't fall for this line. Under no circumstances will a true bank examiner, FBI agent or other law enforcement official request a bank customer to withdraw cash from an account.

Another famous con game is the Pigeon Drop. The victim is the "pigeon," and the "drop" is a bag of cash that one member of a team pretends to "find" on the street, after his partner has begun a conversation with the unsuspecting victim. After shrieks of surprise, the finder's conscience tells him to split the large sum of money with the other two passers-by. The two are then asked to put up some good-faith money while the finder "talks to his boss" about the split.

This swindle has been widely practiced for at least 400 years and is still going strong. Like all swindles, at the climax the "pigeon" is asked for money. Naturally, he will never see it, or his share of the "find" again.

A common technique of the con artist (who might just as likely be a very innocent looking woman as a man) is to get the intended victim so excited, so rushed, so confused that he (or she) hardly knows what he's doing. But simple precautions can keep you out of trouble. Carefulness and common sense exercised by potential victims will stop such schemes.

Cultivate a healthy skepticism of all miraculous offers and get-rich-quick schemes. Be on guard when you hear the words: "something for nothing," a "secret plan," or "this opportunity won't be here tomorrow." And, with any major transaction, insist on having a few days to discuss it with relatives, lawyers, bank officers or the police.
