

Christmas parade ushers in holidays

Owen JV cheerleaders

Asheville's annual Christmas parade began at 3 p.m. last Wednesday, and several Valley groups joined in the festive spirit. A total of 150 units—floats, bands, Scouts, and above all, Santa Claus—rolled along the route beginning at Patton and Clingman Avenues, east on Patton across Pack Square to College Street.

Heading off the parade was the Salvation Army Food Float, collecting food from parade-goers for needy families for Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Hamilton wins drawing

Ray Hamilton of Ridgecrest won the Carver School drawing which entitled him to $100 of free groceries at Ingles last week. On Nov. 20 Gay Fox, long time Carver friend and supporter, drew Mr. Hamilton's card at a school assembly.

Former student Marty Cavanaugh recently spearheaded a reunion of Carver graduates. Many students and their parents attended representing the five years Carver has been in operation.

The book exchange is in full operation now and the project is well used by students. Each week a student can bring in up to five books and exchange them for five other books. The books taken out can be kept as the personal property of the student or can be traded for other books later.

Other activities in the past two weeks have included visits to the Kaleidoscope project in Asheville and Project Pride, sponsored by Buncombe County Quality Forward.
