MURKIN GRAPES

And Chronicles of Passing Events in the City and Around About Us.

—O. S. Cary, advance agent of the London Railway 10 cents shows, is at the Buford.

Wm. Carl Brown, the artist, arrived in the city yesterday. He is stopping at the Belmont.

Mr. H. C. Eccles, of the Belmont, and Mr. J. S. Boyne, of the firm of Hales & Boyne, are attending the Columbia fair.

—Mr. J. M. Morgan, agent of the Ogden Comedy Company, was at the Central Hotel last night. It is very probable that this company will be here next week for several nights.

—The growth of the CHRONICLE has been rapid from the day it was started. Its subscription list is made up of the best people in Central and Western North Carolina, placing the paper with the list of the best advertising mediums in the State.

—The prettiest and most unique delivery wagon seen on our streets was run out yesterday by Messrs. Barnett & Bethune, grocers of this city. It is a beauty, and excited favorable comment as it hurried along through our thoroughfares delivering goods from this popular house.

—A thing of beauty—the show window of Messrs. Latta & Bro. It exhibits a well arranged display of gent's goods. The quality of the articles, and the taste of the arrangement cannot fail to attract the passer-by. The entire stock of this firm is complete in every line and the public can be well served.

—Few of our people know the extent of Elliott & Marsh's furniture factory. They have recently erected an addition, being the second enlargement since they commenced. They are now working a force of thirty-five hands and are shipping their goods all over the country. They are the pioneers in this part of the State and should be encouraged. They use hard wood exclusively in making all their parts, and their goods are stronger and more durable than most common goods.

Academy of Music.

Prof. Zera Semon, the Royal Marionette, the Hungarian Juggler and the Dancer.

Gray's Academy of Music was crowded last night, even to standing room, to witness the entertaining entertainment given by Prof. Semon and his company. The performances are of a most amusing nature, affording the greatest delight. He has added many new features since his visit to this city last spring, and the exhibitions now given are far ahead of anything heretofore presented. The Marionettes elicited the most heartfelt applause. They are wonderful triumphs of mechanism and something entirely unique. They give an entire minstrel first part, with jokes, songs, etc., and are really capital. The dancing skeleton is a marvellous thing and the wonder is that human ingenuity could devise such an intricate piece of work. The pantomime was another good feature, and it may be safely said that the entertainment is much in advance of anything of the kind ever given here.

Karoly Ordey, the juggler and equilibrist is, without a doubt, the best performer in his line we ever saw. His performance was a most marvelous entertainment, and the audience was highly pleased. A large number of presents were given away. The capital prizes were a tea set, 44 pieces, drawn by Miss Nellie Tate, and a chamber set, 10 pieces drawn by Mrs. T. E. Witherspoon. There will be another engagement to-night and a like number of presents will be given away.

Personal Paragraphs.

W. H. L. McLaurin, of Laurinburg, was in the city yesterday.

Dr. M. C. Heath and family, of Richmond, Ky., are visiting friends in this city.

Mr. E. E. Jurney left last night for Statesville where he will remain for several days.

Latta C. Johnston has returned home with his mother, Mrs. R. M. Johnston, after several months stay in Philadelphia.

Mr. Chas. Emerson, of Greensboro, one of the proprietors of Tar Heel Liment, is in the city, stopping at the Buford. He will make a thorough canvass of Mecklenburg county for his celebrated medicine.

Raleigh Visitor, 10th: A large and fashionable audience assembled at the First Baptist church in this city at 9 o'clock this morning to witness the celebration of the marriage rite between Mr. Charles McKimmon, of the firm of Messrs. W. H. & B. S. Tucker & Co., and Miss Jennie Simpson, one of Raleigh's loveliest young and most highly accomplished young ladies. The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. T. Bailey, assisted by Rev. J. White, pastor of the church.

GUNS AND BOLS.

A Chat With Our Sportsmen, and Their Opinions on These Two Elements.

Charlotte has many lovers of the hunting sport, and her sportsmen, of course, have a variety of guns and dogs. No particular make of guns or breed of dogs has a monopoly. One will say: "The Parker gun is, by all odds, the best gun ever made." Another will reply: "That is all prejudice. Give me a Remington or a Colt all the time." A third will swear that a Peifer, a Greenet, a Charbotough, a Webley leads them all. Another wisacre will declare "it's all nonsense. Why I have had a cheap Moore or Parkhurst that could out shoot any of your high priced fancy guns. There are a dozen makes of guns, and I wouldn't turn around on my heel for the difference." So the question still agitates the gunners and is yet far from a solution, which makes the best gun.

Speaking of dogs, one man will vow positively that "the Gordon setter is the very finest in the world." Another will reply: "Man, you don't know what you are talking about; the Gordon is a lazy, harmless dog; won't range twenty yards from your feet. The Red Irish is the dog." "Pshaw," rejoins the first party, "the Red Irish is a hard-headed fool; has no sense, and is so deaf in the field he couldn't hear it thunder." Another meekly prefers the Lullien; and still another prefers a good breed of pointers. "They don't like to go into a thicket, yet they have finer noses, stand the heat better and don't have to always be hunting for water." They all begin to warm up and get excited, and the man who knows more about dogs than any one else, and who has kept quiet during the discussion, straightens himself and speaks: "I know what I am talking about. It depends altogether upon the dog. If he is not born with sense and a good nose no one can give 'em to him. You don't catch me paying any high price for a long pedigreed dog. The very best dogs I ever had, or ever saw, had no pedigree at all. They were scrubs, and didn't know their daddies." And so no definite conclusion is ever arrived at, and every season is pretty much the same so far as guns and dogs are concerned. Variety is the spice of hunting as well as of other things.

Painting Out of Fashion.

Philadelphia Times.

The great amount of out-of-door exercise taken by young ladies and women generally is no doubt, in a great measure, responsible for the decline of the practice of fainting. One of the good old "chestnuts" among story tellers has always been the fainting young lady "coming to" when some one calls for a bucket of water. How much the joking has had to do with stopping the practice, it is hard to say, but fainting is now completely out of fashion, and no one ever sees or hears anything of it except upon the stage and in novels. The changed ideas regarding women and her life and sphere have done it. Since women, and especially young women, have stopped living exclusively in doors, fainting has become comparatively unknown, and even the "coming to" is now a thing of the past. In the past, industrial pursuits, out-of-door sport—these have had their influence in making the women of to-day not the frail lilies that wilted at the least excitement or tilted over in an overheated room, but strong and sensible creatures, much better fitted in every way to make a home happy.

What Shall I Teach Her?

At a recent social gathering, says the Charleston (S. C.) Dispatch, some one proposed this question: "What shall I teach my daughter?" The following replies were landed in:

"Teach her that 100 cents make a dollar."

"Teach her to arrange the parlor and library."

"Teach her to say 'No,' and mean it."

"Teach her to stick to it."

"Teach her how to wear calico dress, and to wear it like a queen."

"Teach her how to sew on buttons darn stockings and mend gloves."

"Teach her to dress for health and comfort as well as for appearances."

"Teach her to cultivate flowers and to keep the kitchen garden."

"Teach her to make the neatest room in the house."

"Teach her to have nothing to do with intemperate and dissolute young men."

"Teach her that tight lacing is uncomely as well as injurious to health."

"Teach her to regard the morals and habits, and not money, in selecting her associates."

"Teach her to observe the old rule: 'A place for everything and everything in its place.'"

"Teach her that music, drawing and painting are real accomplishments in the home, and are not to be neglected if there be time and money for their use."

"Teach her the important truism: 'That the more she lives within her income the more she will save, and the further she will get away from the poorhouse.'"

"Teach her that a good, steady, church-going mechanic, farmer, clerk or teacher without a cent is worth more than forty lawyers or non-producers in broadcloth."

"Teach her to embrace every opportunity for reading, and to select such books as will give her the most useful and practical information, in order to make the best progress in earlier as well as later home and school life."
