Representative—Note and Comments Complimentary to a Phylying Town— What is Going on at Gastonia.

What is Going on at Gustowia.

It was not exactly on the "wings of the wind," but at a lively pace we were transported from busy Charlotte to the pleasant and thriving town of Gastonia on the Air-Line Road. We felt as though we were in old Mecklenburg still, as the first persons whom we met at the platform wore familiar faces. The first hand shake we had was with "Major Boyce, formerly of Steel Creek, and well known throughout the county. The next man before us was our old friend, R. A. Grier, also from Steel Creek, who with his family is over here on a visit to his sister and other relatives at this place. Mr. Grier, we are glad to say is looking about as well as before his long protracted sickness, and is only short of his fighting weight by about fifteen pounds. We met here that clever gentleman, Capt. J. W. Sprinkle, so well known in Charlotte and the surrounding country as the former cotton weigher at Charlotte.

A company of capitalists are building three large and roomy brick storehouses on Main street, known as the Hotel block. When this is completed there will be an entire block of splendid brick buildings, which would be an ornament in any city, and the two new storehouses—100 feet in depth—will be occupied as soon as completed. These buildings all have a splendid front on Main street, which is south of the railroad, but they have a badly broken front towards the railroad, and do not show to so great advantage on that side. This will soon be remedied, however, as the owners of this property intend at an early day to construct as good a frontage towards the depot as they already have on Main street; then they will have a magnificent block hideed.
