From The Herald: In a letter from a government hospital in New Jersey to Mr. E. J. Elliott of East Kings Mountain the news is conveyed that Mr. Elliott's son, Lee, was on guard at the American Hospital somewhere in France recently bombed by the Germans and in the explosion was paralyzed in the left side and rendered deaf. He was brought back home to the New Jersey hospital for treatment and will be sent home as soon as he is able to come. The doctor writes Mr. Elliott that he doesn't think he will ever regain the use of his paralyzed side. Lee Elliott was among the volunteers going from here during last spring. While we all regret that one of our townsmen should be a victim of the Germans we are glad that our boys have the stuff in them to do their bit.

More Exemptions for Farmers

Spokesmen for the nation's organized farmers asked President Wilson this week to order a more liberal application of the army draft law to farm labor, in order that agriculture may do its part in the war. They urged that the government not only should exempt men who apply, but should make it its business to keep skilled farmers out of the military service and require them to remain at their posts as producers.

The delegation that called at the White House was headed by a committee of the Federal board of farm organizations and included the legislative committee of the National Grange and members of the House and Senate from the great agricultural States. The Federal board's committee presented a memorial setting forth the farmers' situation and formally asking relief.
