Looker-On's' Conversation With Mothers of Flappers.

At one of the club meetings last week this conversation took place. "Did we ever go through that stage, wonder," said three lovely matrons, mothers of "flappers." I suppose so, but I believe our flappers 'flap' more than we did." "By the way," said one of these bright women, "have you heard the latest definition of the flapper?" The Looker-On spoke up. "No tell us." "Well, I think it is a good one," she said, "the definition is 'white face, red cheeks, dirty neck and bobbed hair.'"

Time.

(By Marguerite Wilkinson)
Time is God's tenderness
Told in hours and ages,
The sinner's cleansing fear,
The sure proof of sages,
Times' work is powerful,
Ingenious and true,
Making snow out of rain
And rain out of dew,
Making cities out of towns
And deserts out of cities
Teaching by many wars
Millions of pities.

Time can lift a forest up
Where lies a bare field
Or show the naked lie
That truth has concealed.
Goals in my long desire
Time alone can reach,
And time can cure the sorrow
That finds no ease in speech.

Spring Comes.

A snow drop, that first pale blossom of the year, lifts its pure head from the wet earth; pussy willows venture forth from their polished cradles and a flock of blue birds wings glad promise across the wind-swept sky—Springtime and happiness.

Gone is the dark winter of our discontent, for the returning year has put a spirit of youth into everything. There are problems enough, God knows, and sorrows and tragedies and failures—but there are also spring and youth and love and laughter. These are the great creative forces of life.

For truth is not necessarily grim or gray. Romance does wear a shining cloak. Beauty appears in humdrum lives as frequently as pain.

We believe this, we believe that life as a whole is good and fine and wholesome, we believe that within the humblest souls lie heroic possibilities. And happiness begins at home. The atmosphere that surrounds a man's hearth is carried with him through the day, coloring his thought and work, influencing him in a thousand ways.—Selected.

Dr. A. C. Dixon's Bride Is Not Rich.

Anent the recent announcement of the approaching marriage of Dr. Amzi Clarence Dixon, the New York World says:

"Also departing on the Majestic was the Rev. A. C. Dixon, 68, pastor of the University Baptist church of Baltimore, who goes abroad to marry Mrs. Charles M. Alexander, widow of a boyhood friend and a life long associate of Dr. Dixon.

"The bride-groom-to-be is alert and active, six feet three inches tall, gray haired and sharp eyed. He formerly was pastor of the Hanson Place Baptist church, Brooklyn, and is a brother of the Rev. Thomas Dixon, author of 'The Klansman' and other works.

"Dr. Dixon was asked if Mrs. Alexander was wealthy. 'I don't know what she is worth in earthly wealth,' replied the pastor, but she is a wonderful, godly woman; a good wife to a man who for long years was my friend. I don't care whether she has a cent. Money never has, or will, enter into my thinking."

"Mrs. Alexander is the widow of Prof. Alexander writer of many hymns. After two months' honeymoon in Europe Dr. Dixon and his bride plan to return to Baltimore where they will make their home."

From time immemorial, leavening gas has made the "touch" which made the paste of flour and water a digestible food—the staff of life. A flat and soggy loaf or biscuit is an unleavened food. So it is that leavening agents such as yeast or baking powder are employed.

To insure to the American housewife complete leavening of her biscuits, cakes, muffins, etc., which is so important to perfect digestion, the pure food authorities found it wise to require a certain standard of leavening strength in baking powder.

To maintain this guaranty of digestibility—to insure minimum deterioration of leavening strength, baking powder is packed in tin. This prevents absorption of atmospheric moisture. Dampness produces premature reaction in the can—results in loss of leavening gas.

The food official, would properly condemn baking powder if packed in cheap sacks.

But what about self rising flour? It comes to the southern housewife from remote northern mills packed in porous bags. What happens to this mixture of baking materials and flour?

Chemical analysis shows that much of it has lost its leavening strength before it reaches the consumer.

Breadstuffs made with such self-rising flours cannot rise properly—they come to the table heavy, flat, and soggy.

Why don't the pure food officials demand that self-rising flours contain 0.5% leavening gas, the equivalent to the 12% required of baking powder?

Calumet Baking Powder is scientifically and legally correct—the last spoonful is as pure and sure as the first.

Packed in tin—keeps the strength in
