Gorilla Is Brought Over In Stateroom

It Is Just Like A Child When Women Are Around But Hates Men, Says Its Owner.

John Daniel, 2nd, heralded as the only gorilla in captivity and the name sake of a Simian who died some time ago from grief because he was separated from Miss Alyce Cunningham, of London, arrived in New York Monday on the new Hamburg American liner Deutschland, where he occupied a de luxe stateroom. The animal was in charge of Miss Cunningham, who specializes in rearing gorillas.

Miss Cunningham said John behaved admirably on the voyage and rocked himself to sleep every night in his hammock. "He's just like a child when women are around him and he loves to be petted," Miss Cunningham said, "but he's afraid of men."

John is about three years old and weighs 80 pounds. He was captured by negroes in the Congo. He is known as a "land gorilla" in contrast to gorillas who frequent trees. He was out of temper after his experience with the photographers but brightened up considerably when he was taken to his suite in the hotel McAlpin.

Carl W. Akely, sculptor, naturalist and gorilla expert, and Dr. William T. Hornaday, director of the Bronx zoo, will study John after which he will join a circus.

Butcherin Trees Ruins Their Beauty

Raleigh, Apr. 7.—The practice of topping old trees is doing much to ruin the beauty of home grounds, yet many examples of this butchering are seen in different parts of North Carolina at this time of the year, states Prof. J. P. Pillsbury, horticulturist at the State college of agriculture. Professor Pillsbury says that he recently visited a town which is remarkable for the number of beautiful trees in the neighborhood. There was one grove of about 20 oaks which because of their beauty had attracted his attention many times. Oaks are aptrooted and not likely to blow over. Those in this grove were relatively young and in the prime of life and beauty. If anything, they may have been a little too thick, but the removal of five or six or more would have let in sufficient light and air and made it possible for the remainder to thicken up in trunk and foliage and continue to form a grove which with towering height and magnificent proportions would have been impressive and sublime.

"Instead," says Professor Pillsbury, "every one of the trees had been topped off a few feet above the lowest branches, leaving a jagged mass of poles and naked stubs! The destruction seemed a desecration in this instance, since on all sides were groves of untouched beauty and grandeur. "Topping such trees is both injurious and needless butchery of the very objects which make North Carolina homes so wonderfully attractive in outward appearance. There may be some instances in which cutting back the limbs of old trees may be desirable, and heading in poplars and other tall and quick growing kinds, when young, may cause them to thicken up and become stronger, but in the majority of cases this practice should be severely avoided.

"The chief beauty of a tree is its form, and 'heading in' may be done in such a way as to preserve this characteristic of every kind of tree, but 'topping' as here practiced destroys it for all time. If tree tops must be reduced, do it by cutting back several of the longest limbs and to a branch in each case. This method will reduce the top weight and yet preserve the form of the head. The wounds should be made close to the fork, be smoothed, and painted with good thick tar or asphalt paint to preserve them from disease and promote healing. In any case, never leave a 'stub' with no branches, but at least a cluster of twigs near its end, to continue its growth! If trees are too numerous, cut some of them out, but do not butcher them. We ought to have a society for the prevention of cruelty to trees."

Tricks of Fate.

James Buckley and Josephine Buckley met at a dance in Boston a year ago. They were naturally attracted by the similarity of their names. In the course of time James confessed his boundless love for her. "I love you too, James," she told him.

They went to their parish priest to be married. He investigated their birth records—

And found they were brother and sister; more than that, twins!

Fifteen years ago they were inmates of the same orphan's home. They did not remember being separated.

They are very happy now.

"I'd rather have a brother than a husband, anyhow," Josephine smilingly announced.

The world of business, like the world of social life, is so regulated that only by paying attention to the needs of our neighbors can we gain good for ourselves.

MILK-FOR-HEALTH AS CHILDREN SEE IT

In the last issue of The Star two of the prize-winning essays in the Milk-for-Health campaign were carried. Although written by school children of the county they were instructive and informing. Today, two more essays are carried. The first, "The Use of Milk in the Home," is by Ethelyn Padgett, of the fifth grade, Beaver Dam school, and the second, "Food Value in Milk," is by Wyan Washburn, sixth grade, Double Springs school.

"Milk in the Home."

(By Ethelyn Padgett.)

Milk should be used in every home and at every meal. Milk is a whole diet for people to drink. It makes people healthy and strong. Milk helps to build up the body and resistance to disease germs. It also supplies energy which enables the body to work and develop the muscles of the young. Milk is readily digested and needs no cooking or other preparation for the table. Every child should drink at least a quart of milk each day. Milk is a nourishing food and rich in body building substances.

Don't skim milk, drink it whole. Milk is the one common food which supplies all vitamins. The lack of fresh milk in a child's diet is liable to have serious consequences not only is he deprived of the best of foods for normal growth and development, but often he receives injurious substitutes instead. In many families where the children receive no milk, tea and coffee are used to take its place. Consequently the children are pale and not fully developed. It is a common place saying that milk is a perfect food and should be used in every home.

"Food Value in Milk."

Sideache Backache

"I have been taking Cardui," says Mrs. Lillie Belton, of Lake Providence, La. "I got down in bad health and lost in weight until I only weighed 120 pounds. I had bad pains in my sides and back and my legs hurt me until I couldn't walk. I stayed in bed half the time. I tried all kinds of medicine, but it did me no good. Finally I tried

CARDUI The Woman's Tonic

"It seems like it did me good from the very first. After I had taken half a bottle I noticed an improvement. I continued its use and I got better and better. The pains in my legs and sides disappeared and I began to gain in weight until now I weigh 155 pounds and feel better than I ever did in my life. I am perfectly well and strong. I have given it to my girls, too."

Cardui has relieved many kinds of pains and distressing symptoms caused by female trouble. It should help you, too, in the same way. Why not give it a fair trial?

very important in the life of children. It is rich in body building material. It supplies energy which enables the body to work.

Milk is a balanced ration for the young. It contains the vitamins bacteria which is so essential in life. This makes it one of the greatest foods in the scientific world. One quart of milk contains in energy and protein as: 9 oz. steak; 7 eggs; 22 oz. fowl.

Milk has such a soothing effect upon a weak rundown person that it is sometimes said persons having tuberculosis have been started on the road to health again, by drinking milk, while it is warm.

Many children of today do not have the right kind of food as is shown by the large percentage suffering from malnutrition. Improper feeding of children means decreased vitality and lowered resistance to disease. If they could have plenty of whole milk to drink, there would be no such suffering.

The first food a family should have is milk, and the last food to be dispensed is Milk. It is not the only food, but it is the most important food. It is indispensable for children and within reasonable limits, economical and desirable in the daily food of adults.

OVERMAN ONCE STOPPED HECKLERS AT SPEAKING

Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Senator Overman of North Carolina, is one of the most aristocratic looking members of the upper house—to say nothing of being the most benign and easy-going. But you can never tell what lies beneath a man's pique vest.

When he was a member of the state legislature, Overman was sponsor for a measure providing that all farms should be fenced in, and a number of people were inconvenienced by the expense—and very much vexed. At a meeting in the midst of a heated campaign, half the audience began to yell and gibe when Overman started to speak, intending not to allow him to be heard at all.

Overman drew a large revolver out of his pocket and laid it on the table in front of him as casually as if it were a glass of water. The uproar ceased for a moment, and Overman said:

"There are a number of people here who came because they desired to hear me speak. I propose that they shall not be disappointed. Anyone who does not wish to hear what I have to say may now withdraw quietly. And the first man to make a disturbance is going to hear from me in a way that will not be relished by either himself or his family."

The meeting proceeded in as orderly and pleasant a manner as a Methodist picnic.

A dental student was arrested recently for killing and then robbing a man. It's a habit young men have of becoming over-enthusiastic in their work.
