"Fool's Hill" is the adolescent age, the transformation of childhood into manhood and the most important period of a boy, according to the speaker. "It may be five years from the bottom to the top of Fool's Hillfrom 14 to the age of 19-or more, but in that period lies the work of a father, the possibility of making the realization of his own ambition for his boy. All boys encounter Fool's Hill.. Some dodge it, but very few, and others make of it an extended excursion." The speaker referred to "Father and Son Nights" as something to engender a feeling towards fathers similar to that felt towards mothers on Mother's Day. "There is coming a time when Dad will mean something more than the family meal ticket and be regarded otherwise than and frankness between himself and ers. Two phases of the changes in the boy during this period were each phase was taken up in conclusion by the Presbyterian pastor. It was a brief talk but very appropriate to the occasion, one that could hardly have been improved on, because the significant note apparently struck its mark. The program was directed by J. F. Ledford, who has charge of the July entertainment, and the introduction by President Mull was in the nature of a welcome to the joint meeting of two Shelby Kiwanis clubs-one of 1924, the other the imaginary of some ten years hence. The invitation was for fathers as well as sons and a number of fathers were present with their Kiwanian sons-although eagereyed, happy youth formed the major part of the guest list.
