HELPED HER IN EVERY WAY

So Writes Mrs. Trombley of Sharon, Vt., Concerning Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Sharon, Vermont. — "I was weak and run-down, had a tired feeling and bearing-down pains. I saw an advertisement in the newspaper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and began taking it. It has stopped these bearing-down pains and other bad feelings, and has helped me in every way. I have so much faith in the Vegetable Compound that I keep it on hand all of the time and recommend it whenever I have the opportunity." — Mrs. LEWIS TROMBLEY, Sharon, Vermont.

Glad to Help Others
"I had pains in my back and sides for many months, and my work would have to be left undone at those times. My sister told me what good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was doing her, so I tried it, and from the third bottle I was well and every one thought I looked better. I am glad to help others regain their health, and you may use my testimonial." — MABEL HARTMAN, 1824 Greene Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y. You must believe that a medicine that has helped other women will help you. You should try it.

DOPESTERS FIGURE OUT A DEADLOCK

Explain In Puzzling Way How President Will Be Named If Electoral College Fails.

As always happens when more than two outstanding presidential nominees are in the running, political dopesters again are figuring out the possibilities of a deadlock in the electoral college this year and speculating whether in that event the house or the senate finally would decide who should become president says a Washington dispatch.

There are many ifs and ands in these calculations and the dopesters themselves are not forgetful of the fact that only twice in the country's history—in 1800 and 1824—was the college of electors unable to make a choice. And on those occasions the issues were settled in the house without difficulty.

Nevertheless, the figuring goes on as Coolidge, Davis and La Follette begin warming up for their three-cornered campaign, and some of the prognosticators even advance the theory that all three may fail of election. That point in the complicated skein of theorizing is arrived at in this fashion:

Should no presidential nominee receive a clear majority of the 531 votes in the electoral college the house would be called upon to select a President from the three candidates receiving the highest number of votes in the college, and the senate would be directed to choose a vice-president from the two highest vice presidential candidates. Should a deadlock then develop in the house, the vice-president chosen by the senate would become President.

The possibility of a house deadlock is based upon the present political situation there, coupled with the language of the 12th amendment, which provides that if, after counting the electoral vote, no candidate has a majority:

"Then from the persons having the highest number not exceeding three on the list of those voted for as President, the house shall choose immediately by ballot, the President. But in choosing the President, the votes shall be taken by States, the representation, a quorum for this purpose shall consist of a member or members from two-thirds of the states, and a majority of all states shall be necessary to a choice."

In the present congress, the 68th, which would be the one to handle such a situation should it develop, the Republicans control 23 state delegations, or 23 votes; the Democrats 20, while Maryland, Montana, Nebraska, New Hampshire and New Jersey probably would be unable to vote as their delegations, equally divided between Democrats and Republicans, supposedly would be unable to agree, and thereby deadlock themselves.

The 23 Republican states as the membership now stands are California, Colorado, Connecticut, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, North Dakota, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Utah, Vermont, Washington, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

The 20 Democratic states are Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri, Nevada, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia and West Virginia.

The La Follette followers control the Wisconsin house delegation and hope in the event of an electoral college deadlock to swing over also some of the other states in the Democratic as well as the Republican column.

With 25 votes, each representing a state, needed to elect, the dopesters say triumphantly: "There you are; see if you can figure it out for yourself."

Litter from the poultry house will make good fertilizer. This is a point to remember when cleaning out the poultry house this month.

A beehive in a bank is an unusual occurrence, but County Agent H. A. Edge of Harnett County thought it was the best way to demonstrate the use of a modern hive to the most people, and the First National Bank of Dunn was glad to become an apiary for the day.

YOUTH IS PAINTED IN TWO PICTURES

One An Austrian Cobbler and Six-year-old Son. The Other, the Chicago Youths.

Charlotte News.
A poor Austrian cobbler laid down his awl and picked up his six-year-old son's violin bow to give the tot a word of instruction in playing. Every few minutes during the day he would stop his work to teach the boy something about the violin.

His friends remonstrated with him. "Why waste all that time?" they would ask. "You could repair several shoes in the time it takes to bother with the lad."

But the father was eager to waste the time. The boy's emotional soul was being cultivated.

Another picture.
Two precocious youths are amusing themselves in the search for knowledge of the bizarre and little-read literature of other ages. They have already acquired a working knowledge of the best known classics. They are familiar with many languages. They are rich, brilliant, prominent and an unusual future must surely await them. They are far above the average youth in intellectual achievements. They have developed a superiority complex.

But the two boys allowed their emotional nature to shrivel up and die. They have become intellectual machines.
The scenes change.
Leopold and Loeb, the two brilliant young intellectuals, are fighting desperately to escape the gallows. They are hoping to win life imprisonment. The best that may await them is a dreary life behind prison walls.

The picture fades and another appears.

It is Carnegie Hall, New York city. The huge auditorium is packed and hundreds are fighting for standing room. The wealth, beauty and brains of the metropolis make up the audience. Down front in an orchestra seat sits a little old man in formal dress. His stiff-bosom shirt and dress collar are not particularly comfortable, but the little man is radiantly happy.

The great orchestra finishes the preliminary numbers and there is a sudden hush. A slim, dark-haired youth of barely twenty slips out before the footlights and with his appearance the great throng cheers uproariously and with genuine feeling. The little man on the front seat is almost bursting with happiness. In spite of the dress suit and the prosperous look, we recognize him as the man who was glad to lay down a cobbler's awl to teach his little son to play a violin. He neglected to repair several pairs of shoes each week in order to fan the flame of beauty in the lad's soul.

The slim, dark-haired youth begins to play. The audience hardly breathes as he pours out his soul through his violin. It is listening to a world celebrity who is hardly in his twenties. He is destined to take the place of Fritz Kreisler, the world's greatest violinist, and already he is fast approaching that great master.

The little old man in the orchestra seat is the father of Jascha Heifetz. He made a living cobbling shoes, even if he did stop at times to teach his son how to hold a bow and how to finger a violin. The son will soon be able to pay back the loss from the shoes that were not being repaired while the father was teaching him. He will soon be in a position to make good that loss. He makes only about five thousand dollars for an evening's performance—and he is worth every cent of it.

Because of heavy rainfall much loss of nitrogen fertilizer has occurred from the fields of Richmond county; only half a crop is the outlook and so County Agent W. H. Barton is pushing his campaign for planting soil improving legumes this fall. The total orders for vetch seed have now reached 15,270 pounds.
Electric lights for the farm homes of Cleveland county is a new project fostered by the county farm agent and his board of agriculture.

Twice Old Testimony
Shelby People Are Doing all They Can for Fellow Sufferers.
Shelby testimony has been published to prove the merit of Doan's Pills to others in Shelby who suffer from bad backs and kidney ills. est any sufferer doubt this evidence of merit, we produce confirmed proof—statements from Shelby people who again endorse Doan's Pills—confirm their former testimony. Here's a Shelby case:
Mrs. G. R. Cooper, 505 S. Fayette St., says: "I had an attack of kidney trouble and was bothered with a dull ache in my back that took the life and ambition out of me. When I bent over a sharp pain shot through my back. I was nervous and had headaches. My kidneys didn't act right at all. I heard of Doan's Pills and got some. A few Doan's had me feeling like myself again and I was entirely relieved."
(Statement given April 27, 1918).
On January 14, 1922, Mrs. Cooper added: "My faith in Doan's is just as strong as ever. An occasional use of them keeps my kidneys in good order."

ENLARGING POSTOFFICE AT LINCOLN'S CAPITAL

Lincoln County News.
The Lincolnton postoffice quarters is being enlarged to take care of the increased business; about a third more space will be available. Mr. R. S. Reinhardt has been here several days having the partition between the postoffice and the office of the People's Building and Loan office torn away, thus making the whole of the first floor of his building available for use of Uncle Sam's force in this city. With the addition space Postmaster Mullen, the office force and the rural carriers will have more room for carrying on the work of mail distribution.
This room has recently been leased by the government for 10 years, says Mr. Reinhardt.

WISE AND WILEY COYOTE IS KILLED AT GASTONIA

Gastonia, Aug. 8.—The wise and wily coyote from the wild and woolly west has at last suspended his chicken-stealing operations, at which nefarious task he has been engaged since the winter's snows left the soil of Gaston county. Sipp Glenn, a gentleman of color, living on the Craig and Wilson farm, near the city limits, put several duck shot through the pelt of the western marauder at an early morning hour and the gray-coated chicken, robber went down a-kicking. The body was brought up in front of the city hall this morning for everyone to see.

$860.00
SUBSCRIBED
FOR COUNTY FAIR

In our ad space the other day we mentioned that $5,000.00 was needed to finish the work at the Cleveland County Fair, and that men were selected last spring to canvass the county and that they did not see everybody, and that it would be impossible to see everybody. We asked that those interested in the fair to drop in the bank and subscribe for as many shares as they wished to take and the results of this little effort on our part was that $860.00 was subscribed in four days. We find that people are anxious to take stock in the Fair association—but seem to be waiting for some one to call upon them. Why wait, call to see us and we'll take your subscription and turn it over to the Secretary of the Association. If it does not suit you to pay cash, we'll accept your note without interest payable Nov. 1st or Jan. 1st. Every citizen in our county should be interested in the Fair and should take one or more shares of stock. They are only $20.00 per share. How man, sir?
