SIX KILLED ON ONE OF UNCLE SAM'S SHIPS

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 21.—Six men, one commissioned officer, are dead, five are in a dangerous condition and not expected to live, and sixteen more are seriously injured as the result of an unexplained explosion in the forward turn-gun mount of the United States ship Trenton, about forty miles east of Cape Henry late yesterday. The Trenton is a new scout cruiser. The explosion was of such great force that the rear steel door was forced open and five men were drowned. The ship was engaged in target practice at the time of the accident.

DAVIS CALLS CONSERVATION.
BASIS OF ALL TRUE THRIFT

By J. V. CLARKE

NEW YORK—A nation to be successful must be thrifty, according to John W. Davis, Democratic candidate for President. He adds that he considers the logical basis for American thrift to be the conservation of our natural resources. Indeed, he stresses that part of his party's platform advocating this.

Seen at Democratic Headquarters here, he spoke strongly for national saving and, above all, for the guarding and protection of our great natural resources of wealth.

Mr. Davis considers the Democratic platform one of the best in history. Among other planks he mentioned that covering the conservation of natural resources and, under this head, stressed the need to protect the country's wild life and especially its waterfowl.

The Democratic nominee is thoroughly familiar with this subject. He spoke of the great value (over one billion dollars) of our wild life and mentioned that in many states the wild life is more valuable than the domestic live stock. The waterfowl of the country lead all other forms of wild life in value.

The fact that, of the 7,000,000 hunters in the country, 4,000,000 are hunters of migratory waterfowl, naturally impressed Mr. Davis with the urgent need of conservation. Unless adequate breeding, feeding and resting grounds are provided, he feels that the most valuable form of wild life is threatened with extinction. He is strongly in support of all efforts along this line.

"Hunting is fast losing its character as one of the most democratic of sports," said Mr. Davis. "The really good shooting grounds are rapidly being taken up by clubs too expensive to be patronized by the average sportsman. Drainage of great marsh and swamp areas, the natural breeding and feeding grounds of wildfowl, has threatened these with extinction. We must establish public shooting grounds so that the man of average means may enjoy the ancient, healthful and democratic pastime of shooting, and we must have the reserves if we are to continue to have the wildfowl.

The Game Refuge Bill now before Congress, which is entirely a non-partisan measure, implies no additional burden to the taxpayer and is favored by the Democratic candidate. The costs it comprehends are entirely covered by a yearly license fee of one dollar paid by the hunter.

Mr. Davis' support of the Game Refuge Bill is directly in line with his known policy of conservation, economy and efficiency in Governmental affairs.

AMERICANS LOSING LEAD IN BEAUTY, SAYS SINGER

NEW YORK—"Only a little time ago American women were the envy of their European sisters because of their beauty," declared Mlle. Ina Bourskaya, mezzo-soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and actress on two continents for her singing, beauty and style. "They came to Europe," added Mademoiselle Bourskaya, "and wore the clothes of our modistes with better effect than the natives. There was a trimness and cleanliness of line about them which suggested not alone style but mental and moral energy. Properly dressed, with their natural vivacity and cleverness, they are the most beautiful and attractive women in the world, but," she added sadly, "at the present time many of them slump more badly than do the Europeans. Where once they were alert they are languid. The reason is that some of them are corsetless. The fine restraint and dignity which come with a proper corset are no longer there. This is not always true. Some of them who still dress sensibly, considering both appearance and health, wear modern corsets. They are noticeable everywhere. They seem to be members of a new and better race. They stand erect, yet easily. They move with grace and dignity. They do not slump. The whole effect is one of candor and natural beauty."

"It is an odd fact that the uncensored woman is never natural. To be your natural best you subject yourself to a little restraint. Even beautiful clothes are a restraint. Something ugly and careless would do quite as well from the point of view of convenience."

"However, like every other fad not based on reason, the recent corsetless fad is doomed to be short-lived. Women, and especially American women, will not consent to look that way. They have looked so much better in the past, and they know it. And their appearance tinctures their moral and intellectual standard."

"Do you think that the change will come soon?" she was asked. "Yes," she answered. "Like every other fad based upon insecure foundations, the corsetless idea will soon be forgotten. It is a question of people's health as well as a fashionable appearance. It is also a question of moral attitude. It is significant that many women discarded their corsets during the moral slump which followed the war. The fashionable world is getting back to a higher spiritual level. It is resuming its Sunday manners and clothes. And the very foundation of this improvement is the modern corset."

eled and educated in other European countries. She made her debut in grand opera when quite young for such an honor, and soon became known in Petrograd and Moscow, not only as a singer and actress, but as a beauty. During the revolution she escaped from Russia through Siberia, and after many hardships joined a company of other refugee musicians and toured the Orient. This organization, the Russian Grand Opera Company, finally landed in Seattle and toured this country. Mlle. Bourskaya made such a great impression in Chicago and New York with this company that she was quickly engaged for both the main opera companies of America, the Metropolitan in New York and the Chicago Civic Opera Company.
