That Man Cornwallis.
 (From Richmond News-Leader.)
 What of that Cornwallis who surrendered his sword to Washington 143 years ago? What else did Cornwallis ever do than give the celebrants cause for jubilation at Yorktown?

There is one thing he did, according to a biography by Professor H. Morse Stephens. He was one of four peers who supported Lord Camden in his opposition in parliament to the resolution which asserted the right of taxation in America. The man who lost to Washington, before the Revolutionary war was America's friend.

But during the war he was America's most dangerous enemy. Professor Stephens intimates that the "insurrection" would have been thwarted if Cornwallis had been headed. He appreciated the determination of the colonials. He was in no doubt as to their valor, their stamina, their strategy. He counseled sudden and gigantic warfare against them. His superiors preferred predatory expeditions. Cornwallis was caught at Yorktown, Clinton sent no help. The sword of the Briton was surrendered.

The English people did not blame him, Professor Stephens says. After war he became governor-general of India. It was he who put down the Irish rebellion of 1798. It was he who treated with Joseph Bonaparte—and not too well for England, at Amiens. It was he who was sent to India when 60 years old as governor-general again. He died at Chazipore. He has a tomb there. The Indian government keeps it in repair.

He wrote to a son at college: "You must write to me every opportunity, and longer letters than I write to you; and I have a great deal more business every day than you have on a whole school day, and I never get a holiday." And again: "You will have heard that soon after I left England I was elected a Knight of the Garter and very likely laughed at me for wishing to wear a blue ribbon over my fat belly... but I can assure you upon my honor that I neither asked for it nor wished it. The reasonable object of ambition to a man is to have his name transmitted to posterity for eminent services rendered his country and to mankind."

Of all things at present, I am most anxious to hear from you."
 Surely, after 143 years, an American can feel kindly toward this man; surely an American can sympathize with any English soldier who was lonesome for his son.

Poultry And Egg Survey In County

State and Federal Agents Here to Assist in Poultry and Egg Survey of Cleveland County.

(Extension Service.)

In order to further develop the poultry industry in Cleveland county another year a poultry survey to include the present production and methods of marketing poultry and eggs will be made by the county and home agents in cooperation with V. W. Lewis livestock agent of the N. C. division of markets at Raleigh, and D. L. James of the department of agriculture at Washington, D. C.

This survey should enable the present marketing organization to be improved upon and to lay plans to help make the poultry industry in Cleveland county its proper place as a money crop.

The old hen is buying more gas to run cars and supporting the family than any other money crop.

It will be recalled that the first cooperative car load of poultry was shipped out of the county last spring through the influence of the Cleveland county cooperative egg association in cooperation with V. W. Lewis of the N. C. division of markets and A. D. Robertson of the Seaboard developing agent.

It is the purpose of the county cooperative egg association to ship out one or more carloads of poultry next spring.

Cleveland county is fortunate in securing the poultry survey and every poultry breeder is urged to fill out the questionnaire when received.

Blinding Headaches

"For about twenty years," says Mr. P. A. Walker, a well-known citizen of Newburg, Ky., "one of our family remedies has been Black-Draught, the old reliable... I use it for colds, biliousness, sour stomach and indigestion. I was subject to headaches when my liver would get out of order. I would have blinding headaches and couldn't stoop about my work, just couldn't go. I used and it relieved me.

 "About eight years ago my wife got down with liver and stomach trouble... We tried all week to help her... but she didn't get any better. One day I said to the doctor, 'I believe I will try Black-Draught, it helps my liver.' He said that I might try it and to follow directions. She was nauseated and couldn't eat or rest. She began taking Black-Draught and in two days she was greatly improved and in a week she was up."
