Mrs. Miriam Amanda Ferguson became the Democrtaic candidate for governor of Texas because she said her husband, who was impeached while in the gubernatorial chair, had been wronged, and that a shadow thereby had been cast upon her name and that of their children. If elected she promised to give the state, with the advice and counsel of her husband and friends, an "efficient administration."

Many opponents in her own party charged that if elected, James E. Ferguson would in reality be the governor of Texas, which they said would defeat the will of the legislature that in 1917, during his second term, impeached him for alleged "misapplica. tion of public funds." The state senate at that time inserted a provision disqualifying him from holding any state office.

The anti-Ferguson group went to court for a ruling on the constitutionality of a woman holding the givernor's chair which they argued was in contravention of the state's law. The trial court upheld counsel for Mrs. Ferguson. The decision was taken to the state supreme court.

Mrs. Ferguson ran second to Julge Felix M. Robertson, a Democrat, one of seven other candidates in the first primary. The Texas law provides that where a candidate does not receive a majority of all votes cast, the two highest shall participate in a run-off primary. Mrs. Ferguson said that it 'scared" her to make a speech so she made no campaign addresses during her race. She appeared on the platform with her husband several times and introduced him as "'the speaker of my house."

She frequently stressed the fact that she was the wife of the impeached governor, a fact which denied him the privilege of placing his name on a Democratic ticket for any state office. Mrs. Ferguson received 146,777 votes in the first primary and Judge Robertson got 192,692. In the final,

Mrs. Ferguson led Robertson by approximately 100,000 votes. The Ku Klux klan became a bitter ssue. The Fergusons denounced it and devoted many of their importan) speeches against it. Mrs. Ferguson is member of the Episcopal church and her husband frequently attends the Christian church. This Democratic woman's opponent the election was Dr. George C. Butte, a Republican, who claimed that he would receive many of the Democratic votes lost because of the dissention over the Ferguson issue. The normal Republican vote in Texas is about 100,000 compared with han 500,000 Democratic. Mrs. Ferguson is a native of Texas born and reared on a farm in Bell county, which she now owns. Her da!ly routine before she was nominated was not much unlike that of the wife of any merchant or banker in a town the size of Temple, which has about 15,000 inhabitants, except that she never aspired to be a social leader. She believed her nomination was a vindication of her husband's name and record, as well as a victory for the issue she championed. In her announcement for the office of governor, Mrs. Ferguson frankly declared that she had no great desire to hold office, that she did not understand the intricacies of politics or legislation, and that she had seldom exercised her right to vote.

Her neighbors declared, however, that she could prepare a sumptuous dinner with her own hands, if she cared to, and that as a chauffeur she was so good her husband had never learned to drive.

Mr. Ferguson was the son of Methodist preacher and farmer. As a boy he worked on the farm and went to the far west in his 'teens-where he worked at many things, as a bell boy in a hotel, a miner and Jack at all trades. He soon returned and worked as a bridge carpenter on a railroad. Later he studied law and was admitted to the bar. He enjoyed a successful practice, accumulated a small fortune and moved to Temple and founded the Temple State bank.

Educational Rally Billed For Casar

There will be an educational rally at Casar Methodist church next Tuesday night, November 18th, beginning at 7 o'clock for the purpose of completing plans for the proposed consolidation of Casar, together with Newton's Grove, McNeely, Pruett, a part of Philbecks, Pleasant Hill, a part of Richards and White school districts. Patrons of these districts are urged to be present at this meeting to discuss in detail this proposed consolida-

If everything works favorably a petition will be submitted and presented to the county board of education at their regular meeting the first Monday in December, asking for an election in the proposed consolidated districts. If the election is ordered and carries, an eight or ten room brick building will be erected and ready for occupancy by the opening of the fall term next year. The proposed school is to be a state high school which means that the patrons will have a state four year accredited high school. This meeting is called by order of J. C. Newton, county superintendent, who will be present at the Casar neeting next Tuesday night.
