Why Do Governors Of Carolina Die Young?

No Ex-Governors Now Living, But Lieutenants and "Runners" Manage to Exist, Why?

Raleigh.—What kills North Carolina governors, has been asked many times since the death of the last executive, W. W. Kitchen.

One goes to South Carolina and sees half a dozen former chief magistrates of that commonwealth. Going to the north one finds just as many, or more living former executives. The states seem to testify to the fact that the Virginia and South Carolina governors do not take their jobs quite as seriously. It is not written that when either commonwealth undertakes to lift itself from the mud that its governor drops dead from sheer exhaustion. Indeed Governor Tringle but late ly shifted down the lubricated shaft of least resistance and in the late bond effort of Virginia went with the majority.

So it is assumed that North Carolina governors work harder than their neighbors but the good old doctrine of work gets an awful jolt in this explanation. Again it is recalled that North Carolina makes more calls on its executives. They just must speak every time they have a chance. But Virginia's and South Carolina's governors are not noted for quiescence. North Carolina lays a tremendous burden on her excellencies by imposing pardon cases on them, but it is not written that Virginia and South Carolina governor escape these killing ordeals. Every effort to explain why North Carolina governors cannot go through a campaign and live long after their terms have expired fails. It is not the campaign which kills. Major Stedman survives while Glenn has been long since dead. Max Gardner is the disappointed man, so is Bob Page, but they are much more equable and happy than their successful competitor. Linney lives young and Bickett died suddenly almost old.

The exact reverse is true in the nation. Vice presidents die much more easily than President, albiet, there are several presidential death which have made their runing mates go up. The vice presidents always have shown greater mortality, while the North Carolina lieutenant governors abide. Charles Reynolds, R. A. Doughton, Living ex-leutenant governors now are Charles M. Stedman, Francis D. Winston, W. D. Turner, W. C. Newland and Max Gardner. There may be others. And of Republican candidates for governor there are Judge Spencer B. Adams, Charles J. Harris, Iredell Mears, Frank Linney, John Parker and Ike Meekins and there may be more of them. It is not the running or the beating that kills. It seems to be the office, but what is in it, nobody knows. North Carolina never has found out what kills her governors. And here within a day after the burial of Kitchen it comes to mind that the Morrison administration has been marked by the death of three former governors.

If we could see ourselves as others see us there would be a great deal more humanity in the world.

SURE PROOF

"I had shaken down my furnace. The ashes had been shoveled into the can. I noticed what I thought was a dead cinder on the floor. I picked it up to throw it with the others. Inside it was still red hot. My fingers felt like they were on fire. I rushed upstairs and poured LICARBO on my hand. The pain subsided at once and not a blister appeared. LICARBO is certainly the most wonderful preparation that I have ever heard of."

That man has never since been without LICARBO. It not only heals burns but cuts, scratches, bruises, insect bites, sunburn, foot and toe infections, prickly heat, chafing, rashes, eczema and all cases of skin affection of external origin. LICARBO kills all germs, prevents infections and heals the affected spot. It is a household necessity. Get LICARBO today from your druggist and be prepared.

CERTIFICATE OF FILING OF CONSENT BY STOCKHOLDERS TO DISSOLUTION.

State of North Carolina—Department of State.

To all to whom These Presents May Come—Greeting:

Whereas, It appears to my satisfaction, by duly authenticated record of the proceedings for the voluntary dissolution thereof deposited in my office, that the Beam Brothers Mercantile Company, a corporation of this state, whose principal office is situated on Main street, in the town of Waco County of Cleveland State of North Carolina (J. R. Rhyne being the agent therein and in charge thereof, upon whom process may be served), has complied with the requirements of Chapter 22 of the Consolidated Statutes, preliminary to the issuing of this Certificate that such consent has been filed:

Now, Therefore I, W. N. Everett, Secretary of State of the State of North Carolina, do hereby certify that the said corporation did, on the 31st day of October 1924 file in my office a duly executed and attested consent in writing to the dissolution of said corporation, executed by more than two-thirds in interest of the stockholders thereof, which said certificate and the record of the proceedings aforesaid are now on file in my said office as provided by law.

In testimony whereof, I have hereto set my hand and affixed my official seal, at Raleigh, this 31st day of October A. D. 1924.
W. N. EVERETT, Secretary to State.

It's A Manner That Women Have

Wickes Wamboldt, in Charlotte Observer.

"They ain't going to hang you, Jimmy," declared Mame. Mame was Jimmie's girl. They had been engaged a year, when Jimmie killed an ank messenger in a holdup. Jimmie did not share Mame's conviction about the hanging question, for 12 men more or less good and true had decided that Jimmie must pay the extreme penalty for his crime.

But Mame stoutly maintained, "They ain't going to hang you, Jimmie! We will carry the case to the Supreme Court!"

That august body however, after due deliberation, came to the conclusion that the verdict of the 12 citizens was about right and they let it stand.

"They ain't going to hang you, Jimmie," reiterated Mame, undaunted. "We will go to the Governor." But the governor, after thoughtful deliberation, decided that there are some things a man must not do and live. And he was further of the opinion that the tears of a pretty sweetheart can not wash away the stains of a blood crime.

"They ain't going to hang you, Jimmie," persisted Mame, and her voice was tender and her face whiter and her eyes brighter.

It was the morning of Jimmie's execution. Mame had been allowed to see him for one minute. She put her arms around him and pressed her lips passionately to his. As she did so she pushed a capsule with her tongue into his mouth. "Swallow it," she whispered. And then she was gone.

Ten minutes later Jimmie swayed, staggered forward and crashed to the floor of his cell.

One hour afterward when an officer knocked at the door of the place where Mame lived a white faced old woman silently led him to a back room. He gazed at the still form lying on the bed, removed his cap, and quietly left the house.

It used to be the custom among certain tribes when a man died to bury his wives with him. When civilized Governments prohibited the practice the loudest protests were from the women themselves who demanded to accompany their husbands down the long trail.

Women are faithful, tragic little creatures. It is said that 75 per cent of the men released from prison find their women waiting for them when they come out.
