Wind Harps. O winds that blow so wild and free, You are a giant symphony;

But by the fires cheerful glow I watched the flames now come, now go;

The flowers bloom so fresh and fair; Their perfume sweet is in the air;

O grand, sublime, in many keys The broken chords sound through the trees!

Some fellows allude to their wives as the "better half" when the neighbor know she is the whole thing.

Day dreaming is not a serious fault if it isn't done on the boss' time.

The only shadows on the sunny side of life are those we make.

An admirable plan for helping someone is to leave them alone.

Politicians are bad enough, but never so bad as their enemies paint them.

Most husbands can't understand why their wives "wear" gloves for them to carry around in their pockets.

A Los Angeles boy won the secondary oratorical championship of the United States. Poor boy. There's no place for orators in the movies.

AT WEBB'S FRIDAY "The Woman on the Jury". A fine picture. Pathe News and a good comedy additional.

SATURDAY J. B. Warner in "Danger." A thriller for you. A big western comedy and "Fables." MONDAY "America"—that big super film that all America should see and will see.

STRUTTING (From The Baltimore Evening Sun.) Observe the man whose wife is away. He twirls his cane; he makes eyes at the ladies; he preens himself; he stops before a shop-window mirror to adjust his scarf.
