— FINAL COUNTY TAX NOTICE —

The time for payment of 1924 County Taxes expires May 1st, 1925. Already there is a penalty of 1 1-2 per cent and the law adds an additional penalty where forced collection is made. Delay is costly to you and unpleasant to me, therefore see me at once. The County Commissioners have instructed me to force collection by May First and after that date I will proceed, as is provided by law, to advertise and sell all property on which the taxes are not paid.

In the past I have given all tax payers all the time allowed by law for payment and have done so this year but on the above mentioned date all taxes must be paid.

HUGH A. LOGAN,
Sheriff Cleveland County.

I will also give every man six good cigars who calls at my home to have his insurance

"Shorty" Lawrence Goes To Blue Ridge

Local people will be interested in the following dispatch from Rockingham as Coach "Shorty" Lawrence, former state college star, is a brother of County Agent R. E. Lawrence and known to many people here in his connection with the Rockingham athletic teams:

J. B. Lawrence, for the past four years instructor in agriculture and director of athletics at the Rockingham high school, will next fall be connected with the Blue Ridge School for Boys, at Hendersonville. "Shorty" as he is called by a large circle of admirers, will report on July 1 at Camp Transylvania, near Brevard, to serve for two months as a counselor and athletic instructor at this popular mountain camp; and then on September 1 he will begin his work at Blue Ridge school.

When Lawrence came to Rockingham four years ago, the school had no athletic teams of any consequence. But from the very outset his ability was demonstrated. Year by year the teams became better and better, until in the spring of 1924 the school won the baseball championship for eastern Carolina. The climax of his endeavors came last fall when his team won the state football championship for high schools.

How The American Family Spends Money

A western newspaper, checking up expenditures, finds that the average American spends $5.02 a year for jewelry and 15 cents for art; he spends $27 for joy riding and $1.28 for the work of the church. He is blowing in $3 for ice cream and 98 cents for books. He spends $45 for fancy foods and 8 cents for the salaries of professors. He gives up $4.15 for soda water and 6 cents for ink.

He isn't entirely wild; he spends 1111 cents for health service and 65 cents for coffins without turning a hair.

Hollywood Not As Bad As Painted

Hollywood has been painted as a veritable modern Sodom and Gomorrah with its divorces, marital troubles and other crimes. Just as it began to look hopeless, Ben Turpin, the cross-eyed comedian, announces his retirement from the screen, giving as his reason the serious illness of his wife. "I think more of her than I do of pictures," declares the star of the slapstick comedy, thereby adding immeasurably to his reputation.

Nor is it merely a heroic gesture. Friends of the knock-down comedian state that lately he has been doing his own housework in order to be near his wife. Of all the residents of Hollywood, perhaps Turpin would be the last to be thought of in the role of giving to the reservation its shining example of loyalty to conjugal obligations.

Pays Railroad Fare After Twenty Years

Greensboro—A man whose conscience has been aching for 20 years had it easy Thursday by paying here for two rides on freight trains. He used side-door Pullmans of the Southern railways to travel from Greensboro to High Point in 1901 and from Raleigh to Norfolk in 1905.

But 20 years was as long as he could stand the inner gnawing, so he appeared in the uptown ticket office here and asked the fare from Norfolk to Raleigh.

L. A. Pencoek ticket agent asked him when he wanted to make the trip, and he said it had been made 20 years ago, and that he wanted to "make this right." He paid for the Greensboro-High Point trip, too. Fares were cheaper then he was told, and he was due a refund, but he asked the ticket agent to keep the excess for interest.

It was the first time in the agent's experience that anybody ever paid to save his conscience.

Pretty Girl Narcotic Peddler Given Mercy

Charlotte, April 16.—Miss Oran Hicks, pretty Gastonia young woman today escaped a jail sentence for violation of the Harrison anti-narcotic law after she had told a touching story in federal court of being used as a "tool" by Doctors A. V. and M. F. Boyles and Dr. Frank Taylor, in the sale of morphine and other narcotic substances in this section.

Evidence was introduced tending to show that she now is cured of the habit herself and she told Judge Webb that she was through with the stuff for life. He gave her a suspended sentence of two years. Capias will issue if she has further dealings in narcotics.

Jack Hunter, 23-year-old young man of the "sheik" type, drew the heaviest sentence imposed yet in a narcotic case here, being sentenced to serve three years in the Atlanta prison. Judge Webb characterized him as one of the worst "dope" peddlers ever brought before him.

Dancing in 1878.

Hickory Record.

We notice in the Raleigh Observer of June 27, 1878, a copy of which may be found at Wolf Drug company, that there was considered agitation over the matter of modern dancing in those days. One old Presbyterian who was really wrought up over the situation, wrote to the editors in language of the truly indignant. It seems that advocates of dancing had been contending that it was a religious pastime. The man answers as follows:

"There was religious dancing. The sexes never danced together. The modern dance, in which the sexes are sometimes right closely folded in each other's arms, can hardly be called religious."

Noble old pirate! And the gray-heads of the city tell us that it was a bold and reckless man who in those days dared rest his hand on the shoulder of his dancing partner. They danced, we are told, at arm length and were as formal as a king and queen at the coronation. But great harm was seen in such conduct and the modern dance was preached against, written against, and fought against by the religious folk of the day.

What if the old noble could come to life at this present day, and see gallant young men lift sweet young girls clear of the floor and swing around in that position. We wonder if he would call it "right closely folded in each other's arms," when he was confronted with the modern dancing couple as they glided around the floor locked and interlocked and dizzily entwined in the embrace of the other, and turned and skipped and swayed and ducked with one movement.

And then in fifteen or twenty or thirty years from now, when dancing has become an art that only the physically fit can execute, when the couples form human loops and roll down the floor, when somersets are necessary and hand springs are all the vogue, when young men who can't lift their partners half the height of their body will be case aside when broken backs will be the most common accident on the ball room floor, when the girls will grab for a cigarette as soon as the music stops. When all this is in vogue we wonder if some then ultra modern journalist will pick from a present day paper some mention of the checking manner in which modern dancers hug as they glide around, and ridicule the statement.

But the world do move, and dancing was never destined to stand still.
