CLIPPING THE WINGS OF YOUR

"DOLLARS HAVE WINGS"

That is an od saying that has come to be accepted without question. In fact something of this spirit seems to lay hold of some men from the beginning. This type of man is sure that "dollars have wings" that he is "licked before he starts."

We don't see as many poultry yards now as we used to see: but most of us remember what happened to the old hen that persisted in flying over the fence. In spite of her squawking the feathers of one wing were clipped, and thereafter she was a lawabiding biddy. Law-abiding perforce, perhapsbut nevertheless, law-abiding.

Dollars have wings-let us admit that.

Dollars are constantly escaping from the unwary-flying away.

Through the exercise of vigilance, you can make them fly your way.

But it really isn't worth the trouble-if you fail to clip their wings, once you have them!

There is no better way to clip the wings of a dollar than to deposit it in a savings account, promptly. They have a way of escaping from one's pocket; the fence around a checking account doesn't always hold them-but a savings account-well, a savings accounts seems to have a way about it, someway! Dollars stop their flying, once they have been trained to go to a savings account.

It is well worth trying, when one stops to consider that a savings account in this bank earns interest at four per cent, compounded each three

MORE MILEAGE FOR YOUR

The purchaser of an automobile considers the number of miles a car will run to the gallon of gasoline and quart of oil, when making his selection. Many times the prospective purchaser decides in favor of another car, when comparisons of fuel consumption have been made.

When a man equips his car with new tires, he is careful to select those tires enjoying long mileage reputation.

And yet-

Too frequently that same man ignores the possibility of giving his dollars more "mileage."

If, by exercising a little forethought, the man could add more than four per cent each year to the lifetime of his tires, he would do it.

A savings account in any of THE UNION TRUST CO., banks will yield four per cent interest compounded each three months. Savings deposits will double themselves in approximately seventeen years. This is almost equal to six per cent simple interest. (Simple interest, at six per cent, doubles itself in sixteen and two thirds years.)

By carefully watching your idle money, and depositing in a savings account, you can add more mileage to your dollars.

The difference is worth saving!
