LOTS OF MONEY WAITING FOR INVENTORS

There are plenty of fortunes waiting yet for inventors. For instance, a device that would keep men's trousers creased and prevent bagging at the knees would mean a fortune for the inventor.

A stove that would give all its heat up into the room instead of sending it up the chimney would find a quick sale to stove manufacturers.

Railroads would gladly buy any kind of device that would stop the clank clank noise on trains caused by the wheels passing over the rail connections.

Wipers have been invented for automobile windshields, but if some one would find a treatment for glass that would prevent the glass from being obscured by fog or rain, doing away with the need for the wipers even auto manufacturers would gladly buy the patent.

OUTPUT OF YARN SOLD TIME AHEAD

Charlotte, Nov. 11.—Southern yarn spinner have accepted orders for all their production until the first of the year. The additional half day of operation granted in the reduction of the power curtailment program will not enable the mills to accept further orders.

This was the statement made in the weekly bulletin issued by C. Singleton Green, of Charlotte, secretary-treasurer of the Southern Yarn Spinners' Association.

The bulletin follows: "Market conditions have been quiet for the past week. Trading is spotty and buyers are indifferent toward making future commitments. Spinners prices remain firm, although occasional sales have been reported at less than prevailing market prices.

"In spite of the weakness of the cotton market, spinners prices have held reasonably firm, although buyers have been endeavoring to make yarn show a commensurate reduction to the cotton values.

"The drought situation in the Piedmont section has been slightly relieved by recent local rains. The Southern Power Company have now rearranged their schedule and require only two days per week curtailment, instead of two and one-half, as formerly. They hope to be able to maintain this schedule until after the first of the year. This additional one-half day operating time will not have any effect on the yarn mills.

Spinners are already sold for all of their production until the first of the year, consequently are not in position to accept further commitments. "Sales have been reported at less than market quotations without specifying the character of yarn covered. Investigation shows that these sales are on tinged and dark stock yarns and should not be confused with prices quoted for first class white stock."

CLEVELAND NATIVE SPEAKS IN STATE

Hatcher Hughes, Pulitzer Prize Winner Will Address Literary Association. Is A Humorist

Raleigh, Nov. 10.—An address by Hatcher Hughes, author of "Hell-Bent For Heaven" and "Ruint," winner of the Pulitzer prize, will feature the 25th annual session of the State Literary and Historical Association, it has been announced here by R. B. House, secretary of the association, after a conference with Frederick A. Koch, president of the organization.

Mr. Hughes who is a professor of English, is a native of North Carolina, coming from Cleveland county. He was secured as speaker of the occasion by Mr. Koch, on the latter's recent trip to New York.

It has been customary, since the origin of the Literary and Historical Association, to bring back to the State each year some North Carolinian who has won fame and distinction outside the boundaries of North Carolina. Such men as Walter Hines Page, Edwin A. Alderman and Homer L. Ferguson have been brought back to Raleigh under this usage.

It has also been the practice of the association each year to secure a speaker noted as a writer, a student and a speaker. Such men as Lord Bryce, Ambassador Jusser and President Taft and others have been speakers at the sessions of the associations. It is therefore significant, Mr. House feels, that the returning North Carolinian and the distinguished speaker for this year are combined in one and the same person.

Mr. Hughes is noted for his sense of humor and for the vigor of his literary style. It is especially fitting, Mr. House points out, that Mr. Hughes has been invited this particular year, since the program of the association will feature dramatic literature.

THEATRES

The entire county will be talking Harold Lloyd in "The Freshman" by Saturday, Webb theatre says, but it's only on here Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday—so don't wait and hear the others talk. This big comedy—the best ever made—was at Charlotte for five days and they flocked in to see it from miles around, and now they're asking for it back. It's so funny they say that the theatre may have to call an intermission to give the crowds time to catch their breath so they can laugh some more. The Webbs advertise it as Shelby's three best theatre days and those who have seen the picture okay the statement.

"Let's Go Gallagher" at the Princess today is just what its name implies, a picture full of action, thrills, love and romance which the Beam boys declare to be worth twice the admission charged. With it is a good comedy. Buster Keaton will be seen Thursday in "Go West". The local orchestra with seven pieces will furnish the music on Thursday, so a full house is expected.

You can't really make your own future, but you can marry a sensible woman and let nature take its course.
