—Twins—L. Y. Randall, who lives near Earl, is the happiest man in Cleveland county, and parts adjacent. He is probably even happier than that. Here is the fact: Mr. and Mrs. Randall being childless up to the 18th of this month, twins were born—two boys—fine sons. And now Mr. Randall wears the smile that probably never will come off. The names of the new arrivals are Dixon Alexander and William Dover. The children and the mother are reported doing splendidly.

—Back to Shelby—Mr. and Mrs. Everett Houser, who have been spending several months in Sarasota, Fla., returned to Shelby Wednesday. Mr. Houser, former city editor of the Greensboro News, while at Sarasota was connected with the staff of the Sarasota Herald and also with an advertising agency. Mr. Houser sees much of value in the shift of the Florida realty fever to Western North Carolina and says as yet Carolinians are not able to grasp all that is coming.

Other Parts Hear of Cade Machine

Statesville people who put quite a bunch of money into the Cade typesetting machine may, or may not, be interested to learn that the machine, which was being "perfected" in Philadelphia for several years, has been brought to Lawndale, Cleveland county, says the Statesville Daily. They are still trying to perfect the machine, the Star says. A capable mechanic we are told, "has worked out several problems" and made considerable progress in the direction of the hoped-for perfection. But it is also admitted that "there are many refinements to the mechanism to be worked out before the machine is marketable." The Cade machine, it will be recalled, is the invention of Rev. Baylus Cade, a Baptist minister, dead several years ago. The invention was backed in the main by Cleveland county capital, and others who became interested took stock. At the time the machine was first brought to public attention it gave promise of supplying the smaller print shops with a typesetting machine at low cost. That was a decade and a half ago, probably and the Cade invention has yet to prove workable. It will cast type, the Shelby Star says, at the rate of five lines per minute, but something is yet lacking.

SHELBY PLANT TURNS OUT 7,000 TONS OF FERTILIZER

Cotton seed meal, roughly three hundred pounds of oil fifty pounds of lintels, and the remainder hulls, with the exception of a hundred to two hundred pounds of manufacturing waste.

He went on to say that cotton seed meal is used for cattle and stock feed, the oil is made up into table products, such as snowdrift, Wesson and olive oils, the lintels into mattresses, rope, artificial hills and gun cotton and the like and the hulls are also converted into feed.

From the talk with Mr. Jenkins we gathered that not only is a prospect not without honor save in his own country, but it is also much the same with manufactured products.

"Cotton seed meal as a stock feed is much more widely used in the north, and especially in New England, than it is in the South," Mr. Jenkins declared. "For example they use more of this feed in Connecticut than they do in Mississippi. I am reliably told that the stockmen and farmers of the North consume 80 per cent. of the cotton seed meal used for stock feed. That leaves only 20 per cent. to be consumed in the South, the land of its production."

According to Mr. Jenkins, about a thousand tons of the local manufacture of cotton seed meal goes into the seven thousand tons of fertilizer the company annually produces in Shelby.

"We have been manufacturing fertilizers for about 15 years," the manager said, "and we are extending the business."

Mr. Jenkins believes the use of cotton seed meal as stock feed may profitably be extended by the farmers of the South. "I can not see," he said, "but that the use of this home product would not serve to cut down the gigantic feed bills resulting from the importation of foreign feeds."

"It has been demonstrated that cotton seed meal is not only good for cattle and hogs, but also for horses and mules. I am not making a selfish plea, but I feel at heart that if this feed is so extensively used in the North that the local farmers could not also benefit from it, and reduce expenses.

"In the language of an article I read the other day on diversification, we can diversify on the program we already have without extending it."

THEATRES

Mary Pickford, beloved Mary, is due at the Princess today (Friday) in "The Love Light." It has been some months now since America's sweetheart gladdened the local theatre fans. Her new vehicle is a new departure for Mary, showing her in a new role as a screen star. "The Love Light" is an emotional drama, scenes laid in Italy. A new group of faces is seen on the screen with the star.

Saturday brings the favorite Tom Mix in "The Yankee Senor." This is a drama of conflict and romance in old Mexico. It is a good Mix thriller.

Monday "Smilin' at Trouble" is the feature of the bill.

"Soiled" a Truart picture presented by an all-star cast is the feature at the Webb today (Friday). It reveals a story of smart New York. Fifth avenue, and supper club life. The key of the narrative is the remark of the heroine "I am only a little more soiled than the rest of us."

The plot is a revelation of life, and makes a broad human appeal. And staged by Truart is a guarantee of first rate production. The local audience have placed their stamp of approval on Truart pictures. This theatre shows the piece with a feeling of confidence that the fans will leave the playhouse having seen one of the best films that can be offered.

Truart does not feature stars, but star casts. The following will be seen in "Soiled": Kenneth Harlan, Vivian Martin, Johnnie Walker, Mildred Harris, Alec B. Francis, Mary Alden, Wynham Standing and others.

Saturday Webb's have their usual big Saturday bill.
