THEATRES

The Webb is showing Tuesday a picture remarkable for its pathos. The star is the dead Barbara LaMarr. At Miss Thelma Young spent We2- tragedienne, Barbar at twenty-nine, the height of her fame as a screen was stricken with a fatal malady. She was told that the end of the brilliant road she traveled was just down the way. Under those conditions she undertook, with Lewis Stone, to make a final picture, to stand as her epitaph as a screen artist. The picture she made was the one appearing at the Webb theatre Tuesday. Into the making of it she poured her soul. She collapsed several times while the scenes were being shot, and finally at the close collapsed on the lot, and was carried to her bed, never to emerge from it alive. The picture is the only one ever made under the tragic circumstances of impending death, and is the baring of a woman's soul in the face of death. The Webb announces for the latter part of the week the coming of "Kiki" the latest Norma Talmadge picture.

BURNING MONEY

(By Walt Mason)

It isn't what we earn that counts; it's what we put away. I took in coin in vast amounts, ere I grew old and gray. I said, "I'll gambol as I please and paint the foolish town, for coin is growing on the trees, and I can shake it down." On Saturday I drew my pay, a goodly roll and fat; on Monday morn I'd take my way to soak my. watch and hat. All through my years of youth and health, my ways were wild and rash, I gayly threw away my wealth, I burn ed the easy cash. Then came the sad and fatal day when I woke up to find that I was old and stale and gray, not equal to the grind. There came a siege of stringent times; the boss was sad and sore; he said, "I'll have to save the dimes," and fired me from his door. And after all my years of toil I had no plunk, that day, to make the old tin kettle boil, to keep the wolf away. I thought of all the costly joys I'd bought in bygone years, of foolish nights with foolish boys, and shed a stack of tears. ] thought of chances that were dead, and gone beyond recall; and then I bumped my aching head against the nearest wall. But there is nothing in remorse, except an added jolt, and weeping for an old dead horse won't bring along a colt. So live, young man, that when you're old you've no such luck as mine, and have a parcel of red gold put somewhere safe in brine.

WITH A RING IN HIS NOSE

You have seen him.

Magnificent in his strength, rolls of muscle around his bowed neck, his knurled horns separated by creases about his eyes, -those furrows being themselves expressions of dignity.

Sleek despite his massiveness, there was pride in every stately step.

But there was a ring in his nose.

Attached to the ring was a chain.

At the end of the chain was-possibly a small boy.

A travesty?

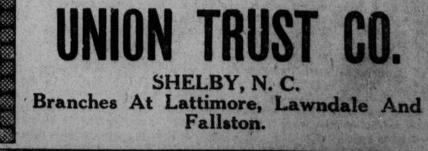

Perhaps.

Yet the ring was there, and that little ring held him subservient to the will of lesser strength.

When we see the young man-or the older man, for that matter-unable to resist the temptation to consume every dollar of his earnings in one continuous round of pleasure-seeking, there is a sub-conscious thought-
