"Go Haid And Shoot, I Eat Buckshot For Breakfast," She Says

Negro Woman Who Shot Strange Negro Sunday Is A Vamp—Will Plead Self Defense

Euzella is a vamp. She is a mulatto, young, buxom, charged with the quality the highbrows call sex appeal, and knocks 'em cold.

"Yes, I shot him," said Euzella. "I had to; he was goin' to kill me. I got the gun from behind the bureau, and when I pointed it at him, he say: 'Go haid and shoot; I eats 'em (meaning buckshot) for breakfast, dinner and supper.'"

Those probably were Walter Gaines, the dead negro's last words. In another instant he had turned his back, and Euzella pulled both triggers of the gun.

"I never seed the man before," said the woman, "and I don't even know his name."

Euzella is just twenty-two; so she says and looks it. She lives at Double Shoals' and was rooming in Red Row. But she and Gaines had the house to themselves Sunday afternoon.

As she talked she came out of the bill pen and leaned against the window casing and ate a peach. Her appetite is still with her.

Teachers And Opening Date Shelby Schools Announced

Ross Expected An Enemy Would Harm Him in Denver Home

That Julius C. Dellinger, of Denver, this state, the man known as Charlie Ross, expected such a catastrophe as the burning of his home, which occurred Sunday, was made known here some time ago.

Dellinger, or Ross, intimated to a friend here in Shelby, when he visited the city, that he expected if he remained in Denver somebody would "get him." And later, when he anticipated returning from New York to his home, he wrote to a friend in The Star office asking if it would be possible to secure a position for him here in Shelby, that he would like to remove his family to this city.

Dellinger told when here of threats which had been made more or less openly in Denver against him. And left no doubt in the minds of the friends he discussed the matter with that sooner or later he anticipated trouble. But he seemed to anticipate that the hatred against him would take more the form of personal violence to himself than otherwise.

It is believed much enmity has arisen due to the investigation into the Charlie Ross affair.

From all accounts Ross lost all the data he had collected bearing on his identity, the photographs and memoranda and affidavits. And it is believed that portions of his manuscript which he had prepared on the history of his life, were also burned.

ADDED FORCE TO SPRINGS PROPERTY

Working Force Has Been Doubled Water Mains Down—New Sewer Is Being Laid

The force of workmen in the Cleveland Springs Development has been doubled this week and a few more laborers are being added every day to carry out the original plans of Mr. Alfred P. Marshall, the developer.

The water mains have been put down and city water turned into the pipes. A ditch digging machine which has been opening the trenches for the water and sewer mains has completed its work and this week the laying of sewer pipes commenced.

The electric light poles were erected and wires strung so that the homes now under construction and to be erected can be served with electric power.

A breakdown of the steam roller caused some delay in finishing up the hard surface roads. This road machine has been repaired and a quantity of asphalt is now en route to be used in topping the remainder of the avenues through the property.

The Schencks have moved into their newly completed home, J. G. Dudley is finishing up his handsome two story brick residence and material has been placed for the erection of homes for Roy Newman, B. A. Lefler and John Campbell on the Westfield road which leads off Highway No. 20 just to the east of the small concrete bridge.
