Dramatically Incorrect The young county lawyer was arguing the case for his client who was suing the railroad for killing his cow. In fervent tones he addressed the gentlemen of the jury with these words: "If the bell had been rang which it was not rung, and the engine had a blow which it was not blown the cow would not have been injured when she was killed!"

Mooreboro Accepts Junior Order Flag

Boiling Springs Ministerial Student Fills Vacant Pulpit. Personal Mention of Interest.

(Special to The Star.)

Moorestown, Sept. 13.—Saturday afternoon the Junior order of Ellenboro presented to our school a Bible and flag. Hon. G. B. Pruet in a very impressive manner presented the Bible and Professor Cane of the Ellenboro High School presented the flag. Prof. Sorrells, J. W. Lucas and Z. W. Greene made short talks of acceptance for the school and community. Our school and community appreciate these from our friends and wish for them great success in their work for education and Americanism.

Our church being without a pastor Rev. Mr. Laney of Boiling Springs preached at the morning and evening hours. His sermons were fine and our people will be glad for him to come again.

Misses Willie Green and Beula Mae Scoggins are attending the Baptist Sunday school convention being held at Asheville this week. Mr. and Mrs. O. J. Hill of Columbia, Tenn., are visiting Mrs. Hill's mother Mrs. Mary Martin. Mr. Hill was the first butter maker for the creamery here and his many friends are glad to see him again.

Miss Mabel Wright is leaving this week for Limestone college where she will be in school this year.

Mrs. J. B. Blanton is in Rock Hill, S. C., this week visiting her daughter Mrs. Straight.

Misses Frances McCardwell, Margaret Greene, Arnie Turner and Iris Rollins of Boiling Springs high school were at their homes for the week end.

Mr. M. M. Greene who has been very ill for some days is beginning to improve some we are glad to note.

Misses Verda and Lucinda Francis of Shelby came with Mrs. Wallace for the club meeting Monday afternoon and were pleasant visitors of Miss Edna Hamrick.

Messrs D.R. and Yates McBrayer have returned from an extended trip to Washington, D. C., New York city and other places of interest.

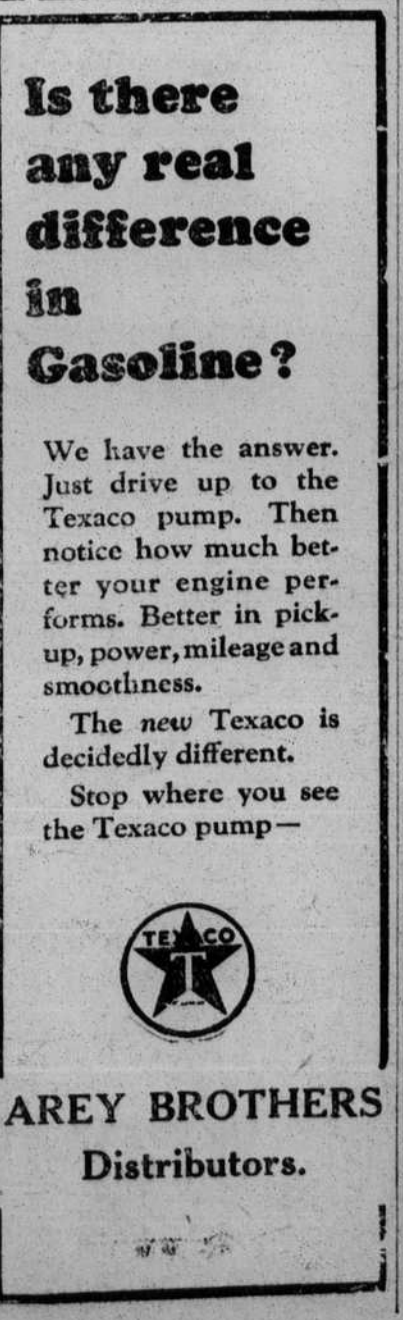

Police Chief Is Hailed As Hero

New York, Sept. 6.—Police Commissioner George V. McLaughlin was hailed as a hero today for swimming in heavy seas to the rescue of four fishermen in distress in a boat off Conny Island last night. Actual rescue was effected by marine police yacht, summoned by Commissioner McLaughlin before he swam out to help the four men. Commissioner McLaughlin's summer home is a Seagate, near Conny Island, and late last night he saw a 44-foot motor boat in distress several hundred feet from shore. Water had gotten into the engine, and the occupants were struggling with oars to make headway against waves that threatened to swamp it. The commissioner who is a strong swimmer and has a reputation as an athlete, telephoned for a police launch, then discarded his outer clothes and swam to the boat. After helping the fishermen get the boat under control, he remained aboard with them until a police launch arrived and towed them to the Atlantic Yacht club.

Is there any real difference in Gasoline?

We have the answer. Just drive up to the Texaco pump. Then notice how much better your engine performs. Better in pick-up, power, mileage and smoothness. The new Texaco is decidedly different. Stop where you see the Texaco pump—

Pastor Thinks Church Place To Do Spooning

Wants Sunday School Rooms Fixed For Entertainment of Petting Parties

Fargo, N. D.—Should the church provide a place for young folks to spoon.

Should it turn the Sunday school room into a weekly "sparking parlor?"

Is it part of the duty of the church to furnish first aid to courtship?

The pastor of the largest Methodist Episcopal church in North Dakota answers "Yes."

In a recent sermon that attracted attention throughout the northwest the Rev. Ernest C. Paris pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church of Fargo, declared the time has come for churches to realize the old-fashioned American parlor is vanishing and to provide something to take its place.

"It is part of our duty," he told his congregation, "to recognize the danger that lurks in unwholesome courtship places. The old parlor, where we courted our sweethearts is gone, and the young sheik of today is often forced to use a park bench or his dad's sedan.

"Churches would do well to provide 'sparking parlors' where young folks might meet under proper and wholesome, but not too strict conditions.

"It is not my thought to replace the family parlor where it still exists, but rather recognize the fact that to a large degree, in the cities at least, it is already gone. Apartment houses do not provide opportunity for young folks to meet as we once did. Then, too, there are a great many working girls who have no place whatsoever to entertain their friends except the park bench or the fellow's car.

"I would suggest a very honey but spacious room or rooms with a piano and so on, as a parlor might be furnished, with possibly the use of a kitchen in connection.

"It would be my thought to have several books and crannies where couples might spar without interference, the whole spirit of the place just as was true of the old-fashioned home, precluding its misuse. The place would be in charge of a motherly woman and would, of course have certain rules and regulations which would be just as lenient as possible.

"I do not think there would be folk to make use of this provision for their needs, provided they understand that the use of these parlors entailed no obligations to the church much difficulty in getting young itself. A certain class of young folks would of course, make no use of it, but those who do not care to meet young men and women under present unwholesome conditions (and I am sure that there are many such, would gladly avail themselves of the opportunity."

Lady Astor Says Democrats Should Nominate Woman In Coming Election New York.—Lady Nancy Aster, Virginia-born member of the British Parliament, thinks the Democrats should nominate a woman for President in 1928. "I don't believe they will do it," she said in a speech before 1,500 members of the League of Women Voters at the Waldorf Astoria, "but it would be amusing if they would."

Lady Astor, introduced by Owen D. Young as the "most distinguished woman in politics in the world," and "one of the most fascinating figures of our time," is convinced that women have made great progress recently in the rapidly changing world of the past few years.

"No longer are women classed for political purposes with criminals, paupers and lunatics," she added. "No longer are they classed as weaklings physically. Look at the channel swimmers. And the women have had another triumph since then. I read of a lady in Rhode Island who managed to consume two pecks of clams, and ate every man under the table, showing our digestive organs as well as our muscles are superior to man's."

Woman's progress in politics has been made despite male opposition, she thinks, for "the machine politician does not like woman. They cannot be counted on. They are an unknown quantity. So it would seem that women are still up to their old tricks of keeping men guessing. Well it is better to keep them guessing than to be led blindly by them."

As for the flappers, she doesn't quite know what they are, unless the term means the modern young woman, whom Lady Astor considers more venturesome but quite as virtuous as their grandmothers.

Lady Astor said the progress of women was a great cause of rejoicing to her.

"And," she added, "I believe in time they will make the world a place of far more rejoicing than it is now."

In the short time British women have had the vote, she said, more laws dealing with the betterment of women and children had been passed than in two generations before. Women will never go back on prohibition, in her opinion.

"They are thinking," she said, "of a world ahead—a world what has been rid of rum runners and law breakers, in which the children can grow up with a reasonable chance of not knowing the evil of drinking."

Lady Astor's speech was a preliminary farewell to America on her recent visit.

The Reason

Sister's Suitor—What's the matter Johnnie? I haven't done anything to make you take such a dislike to me, have I?

Johnnie—Yes you have. When you come to see sister Kate she puts the clock back and it makes me late for school, and then I get a licking.

Diplomacy

Wife—But, my dear; you've forgotten that today is my birthday.

Husband—Er—listen, love. I know I forgot it, but there isn't a thing about you to remind me that you are a day older than you were a year ago.
