

Around Our Town

By Renn Drum

THIS QUESTION BUSINESS occasionally has a catch in it for the answers we give proves to be wrong. Yet these errors bring reminders that the questions are being solved by many readers.

THERE IS NO DOUBT ABOUT getting history straight being the right thing to do. A character in a recent book, that is being considered literature, was asked the extent of his education:

IN ASKING RECENTLY THE date when the Seaboard came to Shelby quite a bit of interesting history bobbed up. Marcus Carroll, father of Will and Henry Carroll, was the first agent here. He was also the agent at Cherryville before the road came this far. And it is remembered that the road was built to Buffalo and stopped there for a year or so.

THE FIRST MAYOR OF SHELBY was W. P. Love according to T. W. Hamrick, who 'knew is slightly interested in such subjects these days.

However, we'll pardon that interest because it brings us some very interesting information. Mr. Hamrick's answer to the query and the history accompanying it follows:

Announcements FOR ALDERMAN WARD 4. I hereby announce myself a candidate for alderman in Ward 4 of the town of Shelby in the May election, having been urged by many friends, our support will be appreciated.

I hereby announce myself a candidate for the office of Mayor of the town of Shelby in the May election. If elected, I promise a fair, impartial and aggressive administration of the affairs of our fair city.

I hereby announce myself a candidate for mayor of the town of Shelby in the May election, having been urged by many friends, I expect I shall do my best to fill this important post to the best of my ability.

could not be obtained and Mr. James Love offered to give them one hundred acres of land in the center of Shelby to locate it here and the offer was accepted, square and streets laid off and his son was appointed mayor and was elected to same until he refused to accept any more. Shelby has had less than a dozen mayors since it was founded, something over 60 years ago, and a picture of each one should be placed in the city hall as a warning to others who might seek the honor.
