Gossip of Staff Correspondents at World Centers of Population

(By International News Service) Rochester, N. Y.—One of the rarest feats of the Hindu mystic, and believed unduplicated in this country, is that performed by Warren Smith.

Smith, a modest, unassuming lad of eighteen, has acquired, through deep study of the occult, he claims, the ability to withdraw the blood from any part of his body, and without the least pain calmly push a six inch hat pin through both cheeks. No blood follows the withdrawal of the implement.

The secret of how the withdrawal of blood is accomplished is closed to Smith and the world at large. Concentration is his only method. Smith claims there are but three men doing this feat, all of them Orientals.

With Spring-beaming its evidence on every hand and the Fourth of July already making its demands on the anticipation of the juvenile population, invitations to the annual Christmas party of Meggido Mission are in the mail.

The rest of the world is sadly out of step when it celebrates Christmas on December 25, members of the sect explain. The proper time for the fete is now they insist. They base their celebration on the assumption that Christ was born during the Spring time, when the shepherds were herding their flocks on the green hills about Jerusalem.

Rulers of two nations have sent little twelve year old Effie Ingraham of Hornell their appreciation of her verses. Heralded as a prodigy, and lacking the wealth and culture that is the lot of more fortunate children, Effie has received letter of praise from President Calvin Coolidge and Queen Marie of Roumania.

Her first attempt was in a contest with America as the subject. Her effort won the first prize and the congratulations of President Coolidge.

Forty scientific and plain ordinary fishermen, composing the Fly and Casting club of the Isaak Walton League, have organized to better their tactics against the finny denizens of the waters about Rochester.

The first lesson took the form of an impromptu casting contest on a wooden surfaced pond, where experts in the delicate art showed their tricks to those who wished to woo the crafty trout with something approaching skill.

The claim has been advanced by Dr. J. E. Crossman of Canisto that more than fifty per cent of the school girls in that town have goiter in its incipient stages.

The medico holds that this community is no exception in the number of cases, claiming that many Western New York communities will show an alarming increase in the disease.

WEALTHY CANDLER FAMILY TROUBLE

Domestic Discord Comes As Wealth Piles Up From Coca Cola Sales.

There's a new love tangle in the famous Candler family of Atlanta, Ga.—the same family which has produced a noted bishop, a manufacturer of soft drinks worth many millions, and a justice of the supreme court—not to mention a succession of matrimonial tangles and costly damage suits.

A man of the Candler clan is suing his wife for a divorce. He makes sensational charges alleging that his mate is a believer in "free love."

The Candler family melodrama began 35 years ago when the senior Asa G. Candler, then a poor druggist's clerk, corked his first bottle of non-alcoholic liquid and left it to stand overnight prior to opening it and trying out its "kick."

Asa G. Candler became many times a millionaire—all from his new soft drink.

Then—a little less than four years ago—things began to happen. The hard luck of the "Candler boys" in the realm of the affections struck its first blow.

The first blast to the family's peace and happiness came when the wife of Walter T. Candler, second son of the millionaire capitalist and philanthropist, left her husband after constant disagreements.

Walter took with him to Europe his friends, Clyde K. Byfield, an automobile dealer of Atlanta, and Byfield's young and pretty bride, Mrs. Sarah Byfield. When the boat docked in America on their return Mrs. Byfield brought suit against Candler for $100,000, charging that he attacked her.

It developed at the trial that folioed that Candler had given Byfield a note of settlement of $21,500 in addition to $4,500 in cash, but had attempted to prevent payment of the note. After a trial of considerable sensationalism, a judgment favoring Candler was returned. Later Candler was obliged by a Georgia court to pay the note, which he did. Appeals were taken on the $100,000 suit, but developed nothing further.

The manner in which Walter Candler's wife, although estranged, stood by him during the Byfield difficulty is said to have touched a warm spot in Asa G. Candler's heart. He played the part of Cupid in negotiations which resulted in the reconciliation of Walter and his wife. This reunion is said to have caused somewhat of a change in Asa Candler's will in favor of Walter and his wife.

With Walter once more out of trouble and in a happy home, Asa Candler found new health and enthusiasm in life. He plunged into politics, banking, and philanthropies with new zest. Then came another blow. A woman known to Asa Candler, he said, as a worker for the Red Cross appeared in his office. In a few minutes a man unknown to Candler entered and hinted at "compromising positions" and "nice fixes." The woman demanded protection money. The man and woman were sent to prison as black mailers, and Candler breathed easier again.

But his rest was short lived. He fell in love with Mrs. Onezima De Bouchel, member of an old New Orleans family, and famed as a beauty. He announced their engagement—then thought it all over and broke it. Mrs. DeBouchel brought suit for $500,000 heart balm. Candler contested it and succeeded in winning a verdict.

A few months later Candler married the pretty stenographer in his own office. Ten months later they separated after Mrs. Candler had been arrested in a police raid on a "dive." After a year of bickering and threatened divorces, Candler was reunited with his estranged wife.—At last, it seemed the family's love troubles were all over, until—

Out of a clear sky Bishop Warren A. Candler's son, John C. Candler, brought suit the other day against his wife, Henrietta Hammond Candler, charging her with being a believer in "free love."

Now the Candlers are facing a suit that is expected to be more bitter than any before. Efforts of Bishop Candler and others of the family to restore peace have failed. John C. Candler goes right on with his legal action.

The Lakeland Evening Ledger, Fla., commenting on the proposition to organize the poultry growers of the county, says:

"There is wealth in chickens and eggs for those who will give the industry their time, attention and money; and Polk county easily can become a famous poultry-producing center, preventing the importation of thousands of dollars of chickens and eggs and furnishing the home needs with quality products. The effort of the poultry interests to put their business on a sound footing is of interest to every citizen, for its success means a constant supply of first class food products."

Within the past few months there has been a marked increase in the poultry business in Gaston county and there is danger of glutting the market. This can be avoided with the proper attention to marketing and storage. Cold storage facilities will give the growers an advantage.

In Shelby last summer a group of Gaston county farmers learned how Cleveland county farmers were getting top notch prices for eggs in the fall and winter through the storage facilities furnished by a Shelby ice plant. Let us over do the thing in this county. There ought to be some steps to prevent further loading of the market.—Gastonia Gazette.

J.C. PENNEY Co. A NATION-WIDE INSTITUTION

"where savings are greatest"

—MASONIC TEMPLE BUILDING— SHELBY, N. C.

Thursday, April 14—the Natal Day

Twenty-five years ago on the 14th day of April, Mr. James C. Penney started a general dry goods store in a small mining camp in the mountains of Wyoming. There was nothing pretentious about this little retail shop; Mr. Penney had the urgent needs of the present to think about rather than spending his time in visioning the future.

There was something different about that little store. There was ever present the gracious smile, the desire to give helpful service to every customer, the insistence that everybody passing through its door should have a square deal and at least 100 cents' worth for every dollar.

Diligent application, hard work, study, constantly improving service—these were some of the outstanding factors which soon won favor for Mr. Penney's little retail shop and caused him to plan other stores where his kind of storekeeping could be enjoyed by greater numbers of people.

Thursday of this week! April 14th! Just a quarter of a century has passed! Instead of the one little shop, there are 773 J. C. Penney Company Department Stores scattered over 46 states. In all these Stores, Thursday will be Founder's Day!
