(By Evelyn McDonald, INS Staff Correspondent.)

Paris.—Paris is planning a monstrous fete to revive the carnival spirit, so lacking since the war.

The coming Fete du Printemps as it will be known, will be held on May 22 and all the important officials have assured their patrons...

The main feature is to be a huge parade extending from the Bois de Boulogne to the Place de la Republique. One, representing the stenographers of Paris will have a wheel with beautiful girls as a vanguard...

All the leading department stores and companies, actors and artists, students and mannequins are to participate in this parade.

The Fratellini clowns are coming to amuse the children and bottles of champagne will be uncorked to demonstrate more freely the real French spirit.

The plans for the celebration are so original and the enthusiasm of the people is such that this year's Fete du Printemps is sure to be a great success.

Women have an important place at the exposition of the Press being held in the salons of the Chambre.

Many curious and interesting documents are displayed; all of them concerning woman in one phase or another. Here are the letters of the Countess of Cavila, the beautiful Zoe who was a favored friend of Louis 18th, also the catalogue of books of Madame de Simiane, granddaughter of Madame de Sevigne. A very rare paper is the announcement from the Carmelite convent of the death of Sister Louise de la Misericorde, formerly Louise de la Valliere, mistress of Louis 14th.

The autographs of Rachel and Sarah Bernhardt, Madame de Stael and Madame Geoffrin are eagerly examined. However, the most important exhibit are the manuscripts of Severine princess of journalism. "Her Pages Rouges" and interviews with the pope are as fresh as if they were written yesterday. Not far away is a portrait of George Sand with her expressive eyes and black hair proving that even at this early date women could be famous writers as well as attractive personally.

The word "midinette" has not been allowed to enter the French dictionary, much to the dismay of the Parisian press.

No word could be more apropos for the little sewing girls with their gay voices, short skirts and happy gestures. They are a symbol of youth to be found in no other part of the globe, but the forty immortal have decreed and their word is law. One malicious editorial explained their action by declaring the Academy members too old to benefit from the smiles of these friendly damsels, so to revenge themselves they jealously refused "midinette's" entrance into the current dictionary.

Whether the shingle will stay or not is still a favorite topic of conversation, even in French circles. They firmly believe that the "bob" has had its day and that women will begin to consider longer tresses before many months. Short hair has always come in cycles and the time has surely arrived for it to start on the wane.

France has been responsible for all the cut hair movements. Joan of Arc was the first and Antoine, the celebrated coiffeur of Paris, the last, with his shingle and la gargonnie styles. For eight years after the revolution, hair was worn short by all the ladies. Marie Antoinette started this for after her illness she was forced to cut her lovely hair. She wore her bob a infant and was immediately imitated by all the women of the court.

At this epoch, feminine voices were heard to remark that never again would they support the nuisance of long hair. But the fashion changed and of course they changed with it, as the women today will do if they find shaved necks are no longer chic.

Gaily striped awnings are appearing on the cafe terraces along the boulevards. Paris is brightening up after a dismal winter, and the early rush of tourists will find her bedecked in orange, green and other loud colors in their honor.

It is estimated that over 60,000 yards of awning have been purchased, besides numerous flower boxes and potted plants, all of which go towards making Paris the "city beautiful."

Chairs are being painted and the cafes freshened up in preparation for the summer stampede of travelers. The Cafe de la Paix is again spreading out far into the streets. This is the real sign that the season has begun. These cafes are the best money-makers in France and the fact that they are kept shining and spotless is an added attraction.

Beware of unskilled workers for the permanent wave. Madame Faure, a nurse who went to a Paris hairdresser's had a very unpleasant experience while being "permanently curled." The assistant had begun to use his electric-ally-heated irons when her hair burst into flames, and her scalp was very badly burned. The cause of the accident was a mystery at first, but the discovery of a yellowish waxy substance on the irons led to the conclusion that the fire was due to the ignition of a small celluloid comb which the operator had omitted to remove. Madame Faure brought an action for damages, and the Correctional Court ordered the hairdresser to pay her 12,000 francs. The assistant was fined 100 francs.

The broadcasting stations are going to be regulated and when we get some regulations for the human broadcasters, the world will be almost perfect.

There is some complaint about nudity on the stage, but nothing is being done about the strip miners who are at large since the mine walkout.

Georgia Lady Could Not Sleep Nights, But After Taking Cardui She Was "Like a Different Person."

Comer, Ga.—Mrs. C. H. Smith, of this place, related the following interesting experience: "I was weak and nervous and run-down. I couldn't sleep at night. I felt tired and not in condition to do my work. I had Cardui recommended to me, but always thought I could out-do most sickness, but this was one time I needed help. I was so weak I could hardly lift my hand. "I can't express how bad I felt. "I know I improved after taking Cardui. I was like a different person. I was built up and was stronger and better than in a long time. "I have a young daughter who had the 'flu' and after she got up she would once in a while have such severe cramping spells, just suffer terribly. I knew there was a weakness and, hoping Cardui would reach this trouble, I had her take it, and the first bottle helped her so much she was able to leave it off and does not have this trouble now."

WHAT ARE THE FACTS?

Lexington Dispatch.

Several newspapers in the state have recently published a table of comparative school book costs, and there are doubtless many parents who must meet heavy school book bills every year who would like to know the exact facts in the case. A citizen of North Carolina is alleged to have secured the costs of books in California and has made the comparison with the cost similar books in use in our public schools including those on which the price is not limited by legal agreement.

This list is herewith passed along for information, but the Dispatch is unable to state whether the facts as represented actually exist, although several weeks have passed since the matter was first published and no authentic refutation has been noticed:

Dog Hero Of War To Remain In Museum

Washington, D. C.—Stubby, internationally famous dog mascot of the A. E. F., veteran of four major engagements, wearer of one would stripe and receiver of numerous medals, has found his final resting place in the American Red Cross Museum here.

Stubby died several months ago. The famous dog has been mounted on a mahogany base, wearing the chamois blanket given him by admiring French women, and awarded a choice niche in the Red Cross Hall of Fame.

Stubby answered the call when the 102d Infantry Twenty-Second division was trained at Yale University. He took his place in the front line trenches with the Yankee division. At Chemin des Dames he captured a German spy and saved the life of an American doughboy.

At Mandres-en-Bassigny Christmas day Stubby met and shook hands with President Wilson. In April, 1919, the famous dog was demobilized with the buddies and paraded in Boston before Calvin Coolidge, the governor of Massachusetts. Later he met President Coolidge when the latter spoke at the Omaha Legion convention.

Stubby was decorated by General Pershing in Washington.
