your telephone never needs a bath

Frequent bathing may be highly beneficial to humans, but you'll find your telephone resentful of even a mild wetting.

While you may have had no thought of giving your telephone a regular Saturday night tubbing, it is possible that you may have:

- (1) washed the mouthpiece without removing it from the transmitter
(2) left the instrument by an open window during a rainstorm
(3) leaned a wet umbrella against the cord

And, invariably, this sort of mistreatment has a way of resulting in such bothersome things as short circuits and disrupted service. Until some way can be found to overcome the telephone's aversion to water it is best to keep this useful instrument high and dry.

RADICALS GO TO DEATH IN CHAIR AFTER LONG WAIT

No Uprising Up Until Tuesday Afternoon. Sasso Shouts Long Live Anarchy

Boston.—Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, radicals in whose behalf there has been world-wide agitation Tuesday paid with their lives for the murder of which they were convicted six years ago.

They died calmly shortly after midnight in the electric chair at the Charlestown State Prison, protesting their innocence of the crime, affirming their belief in anarchy and refusing the benefits of religion.

In his native tongue Sacco shouted: "Long live anarchy" as he seated himself in the death chair. "I am an innocent man" were among the last words of Vanzetti.

The two were convicted of killing Frederick A. Parmenter, paymaster, and Alexander Berardelli, guard, and robbing them of $15,776.51 on a street at South Braintree, Mass., April 15, 1920.

Madeiros Confesses Celestino Madeiros, sentenced for the murder of a Wrentham bank cashier, preceded to the chair by a few minutes the two men whom he had attempted to save by a confession that he was present at the crime of which they were convicted and that neither Sacco nor Vanzetti was there. This confession was used as the basis for a motion for a new trial but was discredited.

Up to the hour set for the execution and even later the seven-year legal struggle to save the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti had continued. When every court and legal recourse had been exhausted defense attorneys still strove to find new means of gaining a respite for the condemned men. Four attorneys hastening by automobile to Williamston to lay an appeal for stay before Justice George W. Anderson, of the United States Circuit Court, turned back only when they heard by telephone that Madeiros and Sacco already had been executed and that the fate of Vanzetti was a matter of minutes. Then at last the defense counsel finally admitted defeat.

Eyes Unseeing From his cell in the death house Madeiros, the first of the three to be called walked the few feet to the chair in the execution chamber without show of emotion.

In a few moments the second room. Pale but apparently strong and vigorous, and quite alert and collected, he stepped to the chair and as he sat down shouted in a ringing voice "Viava L'Anarchia."

Last Word Of Mother While the straps were being adjusted he spoke in English in a more moderate tone. "Farewell my wife and child and all my friends." After a pause, he looked around at the silent witnesses of the State and said, "Good evening, gentlemen." His final words, spoken as the head strain was tightened, were "Farewell mother."

Once more two guards left the chamber and returned with Vanzetti. He was the most collected of the three and seemed quite at ease as he entered. He shook hands just inside of the door with a guard whom he recognized and then grasped the hands of others as he walked to the chair. Without a quiver he took his place and said "I wish to tell you I am innocent and never committed any crime but some times some sin. I thank you Mr. Warden for everything you have done for me. I am innocent of all crime, not only of this one but all. I am an innocent man."

Vanzetti had been convicted after the Braintree murder of a robbery while armed, committed in Bridgewater a short time before.

Through seven years of repeated efforts to save them, Sacco and Vanzetti protested their innocence of the shoe factory payroll robbery of which they were convicted. They maintained that it was their political beliefs and activities which had brought upon them the "persecution" of the authorities.

Serving Sentence When tried for the South Braintree crime Vanzetti was serving a sentence of 12 to 15 years at Charlestown for the holdup of the paymaster of the L. G. White Shoe Factory at Bridgewater, Mass. This holdup was December 14, 1919. Vanzetti always protested his innocence of this crime also.

MORE ABOUT JUDGE WEBB

Conley Robinson case in Mecklenburg superior court two months ago had done him a grave injustice and was the first criticism of such nature which had ever been brought against him during his long term in public office.

In the latter part of his charge Judge Webb said that such editorials, written without full inquiry as to all the facts and circumstances of the cases in question, were comparable to the waves of anarchism and bolshevism which are sweeping the land and are trying to overthrow the government, and particularly the courts of justice.

"The criticism brought against me by the editor of the paper was unjust, and it has caused me a great hurt," declared Judge Webb, as he faced partly the jury and partly the overflowing audience which crowded into the court room.

The relation of the cause for the editorial and its effect came after the judge had started to charge the grand jury. He spoke first to J. H. Podisill, foreman of the jury. In the same manner that a judge usually charges the body, with the admonition concerning upholding the majesty of the law and the great effect of law in the country.

Then came his denunciation of the editorial.

"The editor of a newspaper ought to be careful how he writes about or criticizes the workings of a court without having in his possession all the facts of the case," said Judge Webb. "The editor should have all the facts and should lay them before the people so they may judge whether justice has been done or not."

Hugh A. Query, editor of The Gastonia Daily Gazette, has been out of the city for 10 days and did not return until tonight. This is the reason no editorial comment appears in today's paper.

Once Editor Himself "I am not reflecting on the editor of this paper. I have been an editor of a paper. Was for four years. I have been on the bench 22 years, and before I went on the bench I was your solicitor for about 12 years, and prior to that time I represented your county as state senator for four years.

"I feel like I have been your servant, as well as the people of the state. I feel like the people of Gaston county are my people, because I have been mixing and mingling, as I say, with the people of Gaston county for the past 24 years, and it cuts me to the heart for any man to criticize my actions through his paper unless he gives the facts to the people through the paper.

"It cuts me to the heart for any man to criticize my actions unless he gives a true statement of the facts of the criticisms that he sends forth through his paper.

This State Leads In Cotton Mills

Raleigh—Spindles of North Carolina's cotton mills continued to show the way to the textile world during the month of July, the department of commerce reported.

The report shows North Carolina had 1,844,533.10 active spindle hours during the month, or slightly more than one hundred million active spindle hours more than the state's nearest competitor, South Carolina. Massachusetts ranked third.

South Carolina led the nation in the work done during July by the average spindle in place. North Carolina was second and Texas third.

SOON TO START OVER ATLANTIC IN SMALL "SUB"

(By International News Service) Warrington, Eng.—Edward P. Tierney, of Salford, will shortly attempt to cross the Atlantic Ocean from England to the United States in a twelve-foot semi-submersible boat, the invention of William Oldham, of Warrington, who at first announced his intention of making the trip, but later sold to Tierney.

Naval officials are skeptical as to Tierney's ability to make such a hazardous journey successfully.

Will Aid Convicts Raleigh—(INS)—The State's new pardon commissioner, Edwin Bridges, is planning to make it easier for the state convicts when they are paroled or discharged.

The pardon commissioner will ask one active club in each county to appoint a committee to work with him in securing employment for the paroled and discharged prisoners.

TRIO FREED OVER MAUNEY KILLING

Exonerated Young Men Of Blame In Fatal Wreck. Details Of Affair Brought Out

Gastonia, Aug. 22.—Lawrence Waters, Lawrence Moss and Palmer Black, young men of Cherryville, were exonerated of all blame for the death of John Mauney, aged 30, which occurred early Sunday morning, at a coroner's inquest held in the Cherryville high school building tonight.

Solicitor John G. Carpenter and Coroner W. A. Bentley presided at the inquest, which was attended by a packed school auditorium.

The verdict of the jury as read by Joe Nixon, foreman, was that John Mauney had jumped or had been thrown from the roadster which he was driving and was accidentally struck by the Ford car driven by Lawrence Moss.

Testimony of the three young fellows was to the effect that Mauney, Waters and Black were driving towards Shelby. Just outside of Cherryville after midnight the Ford roadster driven by Mauney hit a big tile drain by the side of the road as the latter tried to light a cigarette. Black and Waters were thrown out and knocked unconscious, and these two suppose that Mauney was thrown out into the middle of the road.

Moss was following the trio in his car and saw Black lying inert in the road when he suddenly came upon them a minute after the accident. When he tried to avoid Black he said that his car hit something, but he did not know what it was.

When he got out he found the crushed body of Mauney also the two boys, Waters and Black, who were then recovered enough to help him take the body to town. Police officers testified that all of the trio had been drinking.
