RICH REYNOLDS YOUTH MISSING

New York Detectives Are Trying To Get Trace Of R. J. Reynolds, Jr.

A late dispatch from St. Louis Tuesday night stated that Richard J. Reynolds, wealthy young son of the late R. J. Reynolds of Winston-Salem, had been located there.

Reynolds had not been seen by friends for a week and it was feared that something had happened to him.

New York, Sept. 27.—Carter Tiffany, vice-president of the Reynolds Airways, Inc., said today that he and his associates were "thoroughly alarmed" concerning the disappearance of Richard J. Reynolds, youthful president of the company, and that the case had been placed in the hands of a private detective agency.

"We did not feel any concern about the absence of Mr. Reynolds," he said in a statement, "until the Monday following our plane crash."

Reynolds, 21-year-old son of the late R. J. Reynolds, millionaire tobacco magnate and one of five heirs to the $50,000,000 Reynolds estate, disappeared on the morning of Sept. 16, on September 17 a Reynolds passenger plane crashed in New Jersey with a loss of seven lives.

"The fact that Mr. Reynolds' automobile was found in the water," the statement continued, "was not particularly disturbing as we thought it had probably been stolen."

"When we did not hear from him at the beginning of the week we checked back and found that he had not kept any of his week end appointments. We became thoroughly alarmed."

"These facts were communicated to Mr. Reynolds' stepfather, J. Edward Johnson, of Winston-Salem, who came to New York with W. R. Hubner, of Baltimore, trustee of Mr. Reynolds' father's estate, they decided to hire a detective agency."

"Mr. Reynolds' absence will not stop operations of the Reynolds Airways but we shall of course temporarily hold up our plans for expansion."

LINDY BALKS AT RIDING ON THRONE SEAT

Abilene, Texas, Sept. 26.—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh refused to sit on a throne here today.

When the trans-Atlantic flier saw the throne-like arrangements which had been placed on an automobile for him to occupy, he seemed somewhat embarrassed, and leaning toward Mrs. Dan Moody wife of Governor Moody of Texas, said:

"Please, I would rather not ride up there. I would appreciate it if you would let me ride on the back seat with you."

The throne-like device was quickly removed. On the way to the city the colonel told Mrs. Moody:

"I don't mind sitting where they can see me—but I can't go these thrones."

THE WHOLE IN ONE.

Being The Opinions Of The World's Never Paid Editor.

C. LORENZO KEEL, II

Well, here I am back again. I did not think that I would survive the superior editor's standard. The only thing that the said editor did say though was, that it was too dumb to comment on.

For that well timed and brief comment I thanked the editor with an open heart and made myself scarce in his eyes.

Now that the second introduction of this Never Paid Editor is over I will get down to business. That is, I will dwell on the subjects that come forermost and crossways in my mind.

First—That long awaited and much-wanted meeting of all the Big Chiefs and little chiefs spoken of last will be postponed until after the fair. Headquarters let out this.

As it was decided that the Chiefs could do nothing about the wage scale before the fair, they recommended that the same wage scale be used during the fair.

In this matter I think that the Chiefs used rare judgment. It would have been a calamity to have kicked about the wages and then had a strike on their hands.

The fight came off according to the ring's prediction. In fact in all history the ring has not lost. I was one of the many members of the ring that thought that it was wrong and laid the goblets on Mr. Dempsey.

After it had leaked out that a few of its members went against the majority we were brought before the council and now we have only one more chance to keep on the winning side.

I am going to stay with them through all ten rounds next time.

Now that the World Series is upon us I have been working overtime giving out tips. I would advise that all who want to pick a winner in this very great match, to study closely the style of play used by both. See what they have been doing all the season. How they have stood up under the strain. Then after doing all this stick to the one that you think will win.

I will name the winner for you next time and then if you are on the opposite side of the ditch from me, you can switch to my side. We will then both be sitting on the fence looking at the suckers that are on the ground.

Ask me not how I am able to pick the winner. The ring has informed me.

At the football game over Gastonia way last Saturday there was observed a man from this city, who had a straw hat on. He was very surprised to find out that he was the only one with summer still in his bones.

"What, eh. Four thousands people here and I am the only one with a straw hat," he mumbled.

The next day he was seen with a last spring hat and no one could tell the difference from the late models of fall. Name on request.

Davidson won that game. It was not as I predicted. But to be sure I always hedge. I find that this is the sure way. Then if asked I always say that I picked the winner.

But that game does not bring much comment from me.

What I would dwell long and linger on is this:

How can a college with a twenty-five hundred student body let a little one-horse hick college with eight hundred students beat them four years in a row. It is a mystery.

For a thing like that to happen makes one and especially me want to bowl some one out. Perhaps I shall. But again I don't think that I will.

It might be like this. The big college has not begin to boil yet. They did not turn on the hot water in time. It is that way some time. Only if it was me I think that I would build the fire about the first of July and then by September everything would be cooked.

While there are football games, there is going to be upsets. That was what happened last Saturday. I am only hoping that an upset will occur this week.

The Lake Segans are in high hopes for their new team this week against the big Furman. But I have my doubts as also the ring about anything except a victory for them. Unless it is an upset.

I believe that the best way to get the dope on how Al Smith stands in his race for Cal's job would be to go out to the high school gridiron and see how the Protestant and Catholic game comes out. That ought to be a real treat anyway.

I hear in one corner that the Protestants are strong. Then I step over to another corner and the Catholics are just as strong. I often wonder.

These are resigning days for the police force. A few more resigners and the town will be free. For better or for worse.

I am now closing and if this is read I will appear again.

It seems that this never paid editor's job is rather a loose one. It is so uncertain.

Many now living are dead but do not know it.

By the time a boy is ten he knows everything you have been at.

Friends Not Alarmed. Winston-Salem, Sept. 27.—Although Richard J. Reynolds, head of the Reynolds Airways and son of the late founder of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco company, has not been seen since September 16, friends and relatives are not alarmed at his absence, George W. Orr, his business manager, said in a statement today.

Notwithstanding this search is being made for him and until he is located it will be continued. "I do not believe Mr. Reynolds has met with an accident or any other violence," Mr. Orr said, "has his organization in such a state that he can come and go as he pleases and he often takes without letting anyone know."

WOMAN'S BURNED BODY IS FOUND

Mrs. Lizzie Fitch Hughes, 75, Was Clutching Roll Of Money After Escape.

Burlington, Sept. 26.—Clutching in one hand a roll of charred paper money, which it is believed she went into her burning home to save, the body of Mrs. Lizzie Fitch Hughes, about 75, was found upon highway 62, early Sunday morning a short distance from shouldering ashes of the house near the Alamance-Caswell county line.

Charlie Fitch, a son, is a patient in Rainey hospital here as a result of burns he received in the fire. His back is severely burned. It is not believed, however, that his burns will prove fatal.

Awakened by smoke coming from a blaze apparent about the kitchen flue, Mr. Fitch and his mother got out of bed and dressed. They were alone in the house and had nothing to fight the blaze with, that gained headway fast upon the dried framework of the house.

Realizing their helplessness, the aged mother and son, who is about 50 years old, are thought to have abandoned the house. In the excitement, however, it is believed that Mrs. Hughes remembered where she had a sum of money and went back after it, her clothes igniting during the time.

With her garments flaming she struggled out, across the front yard to the highway where she slumped and passed away before she was found. Mr. Fitch, intent upon rescuing his mother, or salvaging something from the house, is likewise thought to have been burned when he made a return trip into the house after abandoning it.

First reports that the blaze might have been of incendiary origin for the purpose of robbery have been placed in doubt, following an investigation by Sheriff C. D. Story. It is more likely, it is thought, that the blaze smoldered about the flue from supper until past midnight.
