Spot Cotton was quoted on local market at noon today at 16 1/2c. New York future prices at noon today were:

October 17.51; December 17.44. Saturday's close: October 17.43; December 17.36.

Tropical storm passing near Tampa. Forecast Alabama and Mississippi, showers today, rain to night and tomorrow; Georgia rain south portion and showers north portion. Carolinas showers, Louisiana part cloudy, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Texas fair and cooler.

Light business in world street Saturday. One of the Worth street commission houses reports average weekly sales of 21 million yards of cotton textiles during first two weeks of September and 18 million yards weekly for August.

Manchester cable says inquiries continue to expand and it is believed large business will be done when raw cotton steadies.

Market may hold around this level or rally some fearing storm damage in Gulf states. Hedge selling and rather indifferent demand depressed prices near close Saturday. CLEVELAND.

Cotton Slumps $9 Bale Past Week

New Orleans, La. Sept. 16.—The main feature of the past week in the cotton market was the government crop report issued after the close of business Saturday before last. The indicated yield of 14,439,000 bales, although an increase over the August forecast of only 148,000 bales or approximately 1 per cent, was considered by traders as a bearish development but it was only after the opening of the Market Monday that the full reaction of the trade to the government's forecast of the crop became apparent.

As soon as trading started Monday there was selling from all sides and the low point of the day for December opened showed a decline of 113 points from the high point of Saturday.

The market continued to ease off after Monday and did not reach the lowest point of the week until just at the close Saturday when December traded as low as 16.78 or $9 a bale under the price ruling at the highest of the preceding Saturday.

The Knights of Columbus are reminded from time to time, of the persistent purpose of certain persons to stir up religious hatred in election years. Lately, copies of the notorious "bogus fourth degree oath," attributed to them, have been circulated in various parts of the country. This offensive production, which is about equally blasphemous and revolting, has been circulated, occasionally, for many years. It is an old and worn-out imposture and among intelligent persons defests its own ends by its own absurdity. Perhaps the best way to make clear what the obligation is which is assumed by the Knights of Columbus on entering the organization is to print it as it really is: "I swear to support the Constitution of the United States. I pledge myself, as a Catholic citizen and Knight of Columbus, to enlighten myself fully upon my duties as a citizen and to conscientiously perform such duties entirely in the interest of my country and regardless of all personal consequences. I pledge myself to do all in my power to preserve the integrity and purity of the ballot, and to promote reverence and respect for law and order. I promise to practice my religion openly and consistently, but without ostentation, and to so conduct myself in public affairs, and in the exercise of public virtue, as to reflect nothing but credit upon our Holy Church, to the end that she may flourish and our country prosper."
