

BOILING SPRINGS SOCIAL-PERSONAL

(Special to The Star.)
Boiling Springs, Nov. 6.—The Intermediate B. Y. P. U. had a most delightful Hallowe'en social at the church Friday night. Misses Edna Hamrick, Jessie Lou Moore, and Jessie Henderson chaperoned the party and directed the games. The guests were greeted at the door by Misses and were escorted to a second entrance where each one paid an admission fee of 13 cents. The room was arranged for the occasion with beautiful flowers and Hallowe'en decorations. Interesting games and contests were participated in and the group was merry during the entire evening. Delicious refreshments carrying out the Hallowe'en idea were served.

SIXTEEN POINTERS IN POULTRY PRODUCTION
Keep tab on your hens.
Are worms keeping your egg basket empty?
Pullets in production now must be kept in good flesh.
Encouraging crop reports are causing feed prices to decline.
Clean up the poultry house and yards—vermin reduce profit.
A damp, crumbly mash fed daily will help to bring the molter back on the job.
A new method of killing lice by the use of Black Leaf 40 has been discovered.

The poultry show offers a genuine opportunity to exchange ideas and compare notes.
Chickens are grazing animals—but have your provided any green feed for winter grazing?
Feeding freely for eggs during molting period is the best way to shorten the molt period.
An egg is about two-thirds water. Production suffers when the flock is deprived of ample clean water.
Take a hand at culling. A little confidence and courage plus a knowledge of a few simple facts make it easy.
Beware of the use of artificial lights unless you know your business. This is primarily a feeding problem.
Colds, croup and bronchitis may be materially avoided by preventing drafts in the poultry house at this season.
Prevaling high prices of beef and pork may exert influence to keep egg prices at a good level the coming year.
If you were learning to cut diamonds, you would start on a small one of little value. Yet some start in the poultry business with enough hens to puzzle a patriot.

"Autumn."
(By Lloyd Mauney.)
The leaves are turning golden brown
And soon they will decay,
Falling downward to the earth
Some fine autumn day;
The birds are flying to the south
In search of sunshine cheer,
As the colors slowly mingle
In the autumn of the year.

The breezes bring the touch of frost
To paint his picture here,
Slowly changing earth and sky
And bringing autumn cheer;
The murmur of the babbling brook
Comes on the fitful breeze,
And adds its sound in volume
With the singing of the trees.

The earth is wrapped in autumn glory
With all its colored hues,
Adding to its changing pictures
The best of all its views;
The tinge of winter fills the air
And brings to us new life,
Changing now old season's colors
That help to lessen the strife.
