Miss Bertha Bostic Hostess To Music Club.

Miss Bertha Bostic was a charming hostess to the members of the Cecelia Music club and a number of invited guests Tuesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at her home on East Graham street.

The music room was beautifully arranged with Christmas decorations of holly and evergreens; in the corner was a lovely Christmas tree and on the top of the piano was a diminutive city, built in the snow to represent Christmas time.

The following interesting Christmas program was given: A paper by Mrs. Madge W. Riley, "On Interesting Christmas Customs, and How They Originated," Miss Esther Ann Quinn next played an instrumental solo, "Variations of Silent Night," by Kohlmann. Mrs. Will Avey read an article on "The Song of the Ages," Mrs. Grady Lovelace sang "O, Holy Night," Miss Elizabeth Brown gave two humorous readings, "Mandy's Organ," by Ella Higginson and "Seven Ages of Man," by Hare.

Mr. Horace Eason delighted the club by singing two selections, "Jesus of Nazareth" and "O, Holy Night," by Wilson.

The program was closed by a chorus sung by the club, "Hark, The Herald Angels Sing." Miss Bostic was assisted by her aunt, Mrs. J. D. Eskridge, Mrs. Ransom Casstevens and Miss Putnam in serving beautiful plates of frozen salad, sandwiches, Russian tea and cake with attractive Christmas cards on each plate. The invited guests were: Mesdames O. M. Sutcliffe, S. A. McMurry, Enos Beam, Buena Bostic, J. A. Liles, Misses Esther Ann Quinn, Elizabeth Brown, Dove Putnam and Mr. and Mrs. Horace Eason.

Attorney Indicted For White Slavery With Two Lassies

Asheville Attorney And Broker To Face Serious Charge In Court.

Asheville.—E. L. Briggs, attorney and mortgage loan broker, who has offices in the American National bank building, was placed under $500 bond to the United States district court Saturday afternoon on a charge of violating the Mann White Slave act in transporting two young Asheville girls to Johnson City, Tenn., last October for alleged immoral purposes.

The November federal grand jury in session here after hearing evidence gathered in the case by department of justice agents returned an indictment against the Asheville attorney and broker. It was under this indictment that he made bond direct to the court without preliminary hearing after a capias had been issued. He will be called for trial at the next criminal term of the district court here in the spring.

According to the charges made by the government, Briggs, alone in an automobile, picked up the girls, both about 17 years old, as they were hiking to Weaverville to see relatives. The girls, both of a well known Asheville family, were in hikers' clothes. When Briggs asked them if they wanted to ride to Weaverville they accepted, it is alleged. The charge is that he did not stop at Weaverville but continued on to the Tennessee state line, where he stopped. He made the girls get out of the car and walk across the line under threats of exposing them to their parents.

It is then alleged that he crossed the line in his auto and persuaded the girls to ride again on the promise of taking them safely home. Instead he took them to Johnson City, Tenn. There, the government claims, he invited a lodge brother to join him and the girls, but upon seeing the plight of the girls the Johnson City man reported Briggs to the police and returned the girls to their parents. The families of the girls asked the government to act in the case.

Primary Department Have Party.

The superintendent, Mrs. F. R. Sanders and teachers of the primary department of the Central Methodist church gave the children of that department, about seventy-five in number, a Christmas party Tuesday afternoon in the assembly room of their department, which was arranged with a Christmas tree, with gifts for every child. An interesting Christmas program was given by the children, after which the presents were distributed, and the teachers were assisted by the third grade children in serving cream and cake.

A large number of the mothers and Dr. and Mrs. H. K. Boyer were present.

SEES GOLDEN AGE AS NOW OPENING

New York—America, rich and prosperous as it is today, is only at the beginning of a period which will go down in history as the "Golden Age," is his opinion of Irvin T. Bush, international industrialist and builder of the great Bush Terminals system here.

"Within the next ten years we are destined to achieve a standard of comfort and luxury never before known, and Americans of all classes will participate," predicts Mr. Bush in his new book, "Working With the World," in which he forecasts that the coming generation will see this country gain world leadership in the arts, literature and sciences as a logical outgrowth of its dominant economic position.

The current increase of prosperity is not a passing phenomenon, he asserts, but a vital, growing force "founded upon the most efficient industrial organization any nation has ever achieved."

Science, engineering and machinery have done much to accelerate industrial life, and the broadening viewpoint of labor and capital on their common problems is proving a cornerstone of the new prosperity, Mr. Bush declares.

"Little by little, we have come to the conclusion that a few cannot succeed unless all prosper," he points out. "The present far-sightedness of American industrial leaders in encouraging high wages and the wide distribution of wealth is one of the leading factors in the general stability of the country. The present activity of the stock market is evidence of this widening distribution of national wealth. No previous civilization has ever flourished on such a foundation of general public well-being."

But the accumulation of wealth, he points out, is a means and not an end in the evolution of America.

"We are going on to a wider culture and to more happiness," he says. "We are passing through the shirt-sleeve stage of our civilization into the period of artistic expression. There stretches before us a great highway to better and more beautiful things. There has come a new phase in our national life to make our place in art, literature, music and all the kindred methods of self expression in beauty. Our democracy is built upon the education of all the people, and this is the one huge, outstanding difference between the civilization we are achieving and those that failed in the past."

Mrs. Hoover Does Not Go To The "Beauty Parlors"

Does Her Own Hair, Her Move Into White House Worries Beautifiers.

By ALLENE SUMNER NEA Service Writer

Washington.—Mrs. Herbert Hoover, First Lady-elect, does not go now, and never has gone, say those "in the know," to a beauty parlor for a shampoo and curl and all the hirsute what-have-yous that beauty parlors proffer.

Lady in fact, leaves the White House without knowing just what beauty parlors can do, it'll not be the fault of the parlors.

The light is on. It's such an open secret in the Washington hair-dressing trade that someone must capture the good will and work of the next First Lady that the matter has even been brought up in closed sessions of beauty parlor associations in solemn convention assemblies.

"The entire beauty business the country over will suffer if it is learned that Mrs. Hoover does her own hair and rarely, if ever, has a professional "facial," is the word which has seeped out through authentic but unquotable channels.

"She must be made to see that not only can she personally profit by swinging into line with all modern women and having professional beauty work done, but she must be made to see that it is her duty as America's First Woman to bolster up this great industry.

One speaker in such a gathering rose to his feet to remind the cause that Mrs. Coolidge never had permitted herself to buy or wear imported clothes, and that what she had done to strengthen the cause of American designing, so Mrs. Hoover must do for the American beauty shop.

A girl in a shop where Mrs. Coolidge has gone for special tonic and scalp massage treatments throughout her residence in the White House, outlined the situation like this:

"About half a dozen beauty parlors in this city are lying awake nights to dope out a plan to get Mrs. Hoover as a customer. Our shop is working by approach through several of her close friends who have been our customers for years. They have promised to do everything possible to bring her to us."

Most of the other shops are using the same tactics. The Hoovers are sufficiently well known in Washington for the shops to know that the approach simply cannot be through graft or bribery. Queen Marie might accept a set of hand-engraved toilet receptacles filled with a certain brand of toilet prep-

At The Theatres

"Adoration," starring the beauty Billie Dove, is on at the Webb today for a repetition of the program. Miss Dove is very popular with Shelby audiences, and she filled the house for Claude Webb last night. Another beauty is due tomorrow—Miss Corinne Griffith. This very exclusive member of the film colony is starring in her latest—"Outcast." It is to be a very, very fine show, a sort of later-day Camille, in which a lady of the streets, falls really and genuinely in love. Miss Griffith is back after a lapse, and is said to be better than ever. And this is her best performance. It will undoubtedly prove well worth seeing, as it is a love story of the sort that gets you where you live.
