At The Theatres

"Gang War" advertised as a "part talkie," featuring Olive Borden and Jack Pickford, an F. B. O. special, is the stellar vehicle at the Princess today. This is a tremendously impressive piece, made on an elaborate scale, revealing the life in the big time gang world. Olive Borden has never been seen in a role more fitting to her talents. The theme of the piece is the love of a girl of the underworld for a man she had the right to love.

That peach of an actress Phyllis Haver is the star of the Webb picture—"The Shady Lady"—showing today. Phyllis is the greatest vamp of them all, and this is an especially good picture revealing that sort of life.

Tomorrow "The Whip" tops the bill. Dorothy Mackall is the star, with three other notable players in the cast—Ralph Forbes, Anna Q. Nilsson and Lowell Sherman. This is described as a real old fashioned melodrama in a modern setting. This sort of play has lately become very popular and this is an especially good one.

Cotton Market

(By John F. Clark and Co.) Cotton was quoted at noon today on New York exchange: March 20.11; May 20.19.

Moderate business in Worth St. last week but demand is broadening. Manchester cables say, sales improved at close of the week. India bidding more freely. Chinese demand shows gain. New Bedford special says, mill operations selling new high mark, mills running 111.6 per cent of single shift capacity. New York Herald-Tribune, Memphis says, Demand trading low, grades in ample supply but whiter grades have reached the famine stage with short interest large. Indications of a possible decrease in acreage becoming visible. Plenty of moisture in the ground and hibernated weevils probably greatly thinned by sleet, snow and freezing weather. Look for market to work higher particularly after March notices are out of the way tomorrow. CLEVELAND, O.

Poultry shipments have begun throughout North Carolina and growers are swapping cull hens for ready cash at the car doors.

Terry Roberts Loses His Bout To Georgian; Good Fight Card

Joe Singleton, Amateur Boxer, Goes To Draw With Veteran Ralph Hood.

Arthur Sides gave Shelby the best boxing program Saturday night it can hope to see for a long time, and incidentally he uncovered a lithe, slashing young fellow who gave the redoubtable Terry Roberts all he was looking for, and then some.

Roberts, a general favorite throughout this section, lost the decision in the 10-round main attraction to Baxter Roper, of Columbus, Georgia, although it was such a mixup that the decision might have gone either way, or to no decision at all unless one had been selected as the best wrestler, and Roper undoubtedly would have won then.

A Slashing Fight.

The main bout, however, was handicapped because the semi-final which preceded was far more colorful than the average main bout throughout this section. In the semi Big Joe Singleton, Shelby high athlete, mixed it, roughly and gladly, with Ralph Hood, veteran Charlotte fighter, and at the end of the six rounds Singleton's husky physique and nerve gave him a draw with the cagey ring experience of Hood. The first half of the slashing, toe-to-toe slugging undoubtedly saw the lanky Shelby boy with the ups, but in the final rounds Hood seemed to have sized Singleton up with the result that in the final setto the Charlotte fighter had Singleton in rather bad condition when the gong sounded. As it was the veteran fight critics about the ringside saw enough in Singleton, who fought without pay to hold his amateur athletic standing, to realize that he has the prospects of a remarkable future. Had Singleton possessed half the ring experience of Hood the fight would never have lasted the full six rounds. Not more than once did Big Joe use an uppercut and all he used his left for was a jabbing defense while he was fighting an overhand game which Hood soon learned to cover up on. As it was a few well timed upper cuts and a little more work by the left might have won the bout for the Shelbyite. Nevertheless there is no room for complaint; the semi-final was worth the entire price of the show.

Sooner or later most of the fight fans here abouts are going to get the idea that this "Kayo" Foster, from McAdenville, is no other than Joe Jones' Dynamite Dunn. In his first fight here the long-limbed, loose-jointed Foster stopped his man in a hurry, and Saturday night when J. D. McCullen, of the Ora Mill, decided to mix it with Foster, the bout ended in the third round when Foster caught McCullen flush on the chin, so flush that McCullen was still dreaming when the referee raised up after counting ten.

Logan "Babe" Carr, the pride of the Cleveland Cloth village and a local favorite, met just a bit too much experience in his bout with Johnny Fisher, of Lowell. "Babe" rushed and slugged with all of his dare-devil nature, but Johnny just knew too much for the nery little Cleveland Cloth mill fighter. "K. O." Burrage, of Belmont, was a shade the better in his bout with Crown Lind, of the Dover Mill, but around the ringside it was the general opinion that Lind, minus ring experience, was the niftiest looking youngster in the ring during the night, and he certainly made it plain that he wasn't a bit backward about going in and swapping blows with the other fellow regardless of experience. The "Stump" Braswell-"Boots" Hall bout failed to get on the boards due to a finger injury suffered by Braswell.

Wrestling And—

The Roberts-Roper affair could be staged here again with a record crowd, provided the two huskies do a bit more fighting. Saturday night Roper wrestled seven of the 10 rounds away and Roberts clinched about the same number off the timekeeper's watch. When they did mix it was a treat, but when they clinched they remained together longer than a young sheik out on his first necking party. In actual fighting ability Roberts seemed to be a shade better, but the decision of the judges met with the approval of fans in awarding the bout to Roper.
