

Prominent Farmer Goes To His Reward

Wilson P. Dellinger, Son Of C. D. Dellinger, Dies In Lincoln. 4,000 Attend Funeral.

(Special to The Star.) Funeral services for Wilson P. Dellinger, age 47 years, 10 months 21 days, who was found dead in bed at his home at Play Friday morning, his death being attributed to unknown cause, were conducted at the Cedar Grove church by the Rev. Mr. Lowell, a Lutheran minister. Mr. Dellinger was one of the most prominent farmers in Lincoln county, and also held in high esteem by everyone who knew him, this being proved by the large number attending the funeral services. A conservative estimate of the number people attending was 4,000, with a string of cars for two miles. The passing of Mr. Dellinger is a loss irreparable, he being an active member of the Junior Order. This order was represented by two groups, one from Cherryville and one from his lodge of Play.

It Was Time.

Because her husband has not taken a bath in the 24 years they have been married, Mrs. George W. King, of Hope, Ind., has filed suit for divorce. Gee, how has she stood it this long?

Oh, What's The Use.

This country has laws against cruel and unusual punishments. And yet a Brooklyn man who thrashed his wife has been ordered to kiss his mother-in-law.

That Chicago.

After 25 years on the force a Chicago policeman recently made his first arrest. And now you know what is the matter with Chicago.

Very Tiny.

A baby girl weighing only 28 ounces was born in a London hospital and is doing nicely, being fed with a fountain pen filler.

four boys and six girls, all single except two girls. Also three sisters and one brother.

Mr. Dellinger is the son of Mr. Charles Dellinger, who is known throughout the surrounding counties as being a large land holder.

Quack Doctors In London Prospering

Officer In Medical Association Declares Majority Of Britishers Gullible.

London.—Not only in the United States do quack doctors prosper at the expense of a gullible public.

In the opinion of a prominent official of the British Medical association, quack doctors were never so prosperous in England as they are at the present time.

Englishmen guffawed recently when they read of a colored American doctor being arrested for telling a negro to bury his foot in the earth for over an hour at dawn to cure his rheumatism. According to the British Medical association's spokesman, however, there are many Englishmen of good education but poor medical knowledge who are just as ignorant as the rheumatic negro.

Quack Prescriptions. "The majority of people would be surprised to learn what most of the medicines prescribed by these quacks do contain," said the official. "Here are just a few examples of quack medicines and what they were found to contain."

Alligator Oil, said to cure squints and cross-eyes—crude machine oil, sold at from 50c to $2 a bottle by the quack.

Rheumatism Cures — A medicine containing only crude liquorice powder and water; an embrocation consisting of soft soap, ammonia and water; an "acid expeller" consisting of weak lime juice and soda, bought at under $1 a gallon and sold at $25 a tube; embrocation composed of turpentine and cayenne pepper; "special capsules" filled with castor oil.

"Many preparations announced as 'certain cures' for digestive troubles," added the official, "have been found to contain nothing but water and sugar.

Easy To Sell. "Educated people are often more gullible than the ignorant, we have found from an investigation here. All you have to do nowadays is to talk about electricity, rays or 'the latest scientific discovery' to sell any sort of foolish nostrum to some people.

"The law on the subject in England is unsatisfactory. The legal assumption at present, based on the principle of let the buyer beware, is that if the purchaser of a patent medicine is deluded that is his lookout. The results are often disastrous to health."

Icy Honeymoon. Anderson, Ind.—Ice has interrupted the aerial honeymoon of Charles S. Mott, of Detroit, a vice president of General Motors, and the former Mrs. Dee Van Balkon Fuery, Detroit society editor. Married at Toledo, they flew to Anderson, where ice on the wings of the plane forced it down. Then they continued on their way to Mott's ranch in Arizona by train.

Announcement that the Prince of Wales will keep the horse that never threw him disposes of the popular idea that there was no such animal.—Boston Transcript.

What? Stop Her!

New York.—Mrs. Ruth Pratt goes to Washington to be a member of congress with the affections of her colleagues in the board of aldermen, but with a warning. Said Alderman Peter J. McGuinness in a farewell: "Them cold babies down there won't let her talk two hours like she kept us here. There will be no chance like that in the board where men are men."

Coolidge's Speaker.

Washington.—The greatest radio speech maker in history is to take to Northampton, Mass., the stand of the microphone into which have been delivered many of the 40 radio speeches he has made in five and a half years. He is starting a custom. Microphone stands are to be presented hereafter to each retiring president.
