

This Man Original "Tough Luck Guy"

Monroe—James C. Broom evidently ranks right up with the original trouble man. Sometime ago he stayed in a hospital two months. Then he had an operation for mastoiditis and after that he had his appendix removed. While he was in the hospital his house burned down with most of his furniture being destroyed.

Shortly after leaving the hospital his mules ran away with him and both his legs were broken. And now he's in the hospital again, his hand so badly mangled by machinery that it may have to be amputated.

In case any debate with Great Britain over frontiers arises as the result of the Byrd, explorations, there will be a hard, cold job ahead for a few surveyors.—Detroit Free Press.

We're not going to get snooty about the Einstein theory, because if there's nothing else to be said in its favor, at least no one has written a theme song for it.—New York Evening Post.

Takings, Leavings Of Coolidge Couple

Among Other Things Calvin Carries Away, Last Pay Check Of $6,250.

The "takings and leavings" of Citizen Calvin Coolidge and Citizeness Coolidge upon leaving the White House are summarized by Time, as follows: "Mr. Coolidge took away ten pounds more of flesh than he had on going to the White House. He also took; an engraved golden gridiron from the Gridiron (press) club; the official picture of his cabinet photographed by each member; a microphone on a stand built to his measure by the National Broadcasting Co. (Mr. Coolidge surprised by this last minute gift, said he could use the stand to take his breakfast on); and his final monthly pay check from the U. S. government ($6,250).

"Mrs. Coolidge took a diamond and platinum brooch 1 1/2 inches by 3 1/2 inches on a 22-inch diamond and platinum chain, the whole containing nearly 400 diamonds (largest stone, five carats); also a pink leather book containing the names of the lady admirers who presented the brooch (duplicate filed in the secret archives of the state department); a large silver bowl and candlesticks presented by Lady Howard on behalf of the diplomatic corps, as wedding gifts for John Coolidge and Florence Trumbull; a check for $100,000 contributed to the endowment of Clark school for the deaf (where she used to teach); her ginger-colored chow, Tiny Tim.

"Mr. Coolidge left stacks of photographs autographed for mementos (the signed 256 at one sitting); 553 handshakes on his last day in office; two last button-pressings (one was supposed to wreck with a blast of dynamite the last standing vestige of old Fort Sackville at Vincennes, Ind. The blast was a dud, so the building had to be burnt. The other button-pressing opened a new bridge across San Francisco Bay); a signed bill appropriating $48,000 for a presidential week-end retreat, his achievements, chief of which he mentioned to newsgathers as follows:

"Minding own business: Prosperity and tax reductions; the Kellogg Peace Treaty; Improved Mexican relations; and a radio 'good-bye to all of you... hope that you will enjoy the future as much as I have the least eight years."

Champion Turkey Grower Ambitious Woman

Thousands of Dollars Reward Patience in Canada

It takes all kinds of turkeys to make a farm. But it took Mrs. W. A. Freeman to find the "key" in turkey. Here's how it all happened: Once upon a time there was a big, big raffle. Mrs. Freeman drew the lucky number and a pair of the finest bronze turkeys you have, or haven't ever seen. She took them to her home at Ardeno, a 24-mile stone's throw from Calgary, Canada, and for awhile they were very, very happy.

But, alas, they realized that their lives were quite empty, until one day Mrs. Turkey had a nice flock of youngsters running about her. After that Pop and Mom Turkey settled down to a life of quiet domesticity, adding continuously to the number of their offspring, who in turn—well, you know how history repeats itself.

As a result of all this, the smiling little lady, known as "Canada's Turkey Queen," has developed quite an establishment; in fact, she expects this year that the personnel of her farm will reach a total of 5,000 birds. Incidentally, Mrs. Freeman's husband owns a farm of no mean proportions, so that raising turkey is just a side line with her "to get a little pin money." This year, according to her own estimate, her "pin money" will approximate a mere ten grand.

Copeland's Health Talk On Tuberculosis

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D. (United States Senator and Former Health Commissioner of New York.)

In my mail I find a letter from Charlotte, N. C., requesting an article on tuberculosis. Every request of this sort gives me a thrill of unhappiness. I am not unhappy because someone has asked for an article, but because such a request is founded on the experience of some unfortunate. This letter leads me to suspect that the writer may have tuberculosis, or fears she may have it.

It is a disease far less prevalent than it was even a generation ago. Public health education of tuberculosis. It was not long ago that one funeral out of seven was held for somebody who had died of this disease. This is not the case today. I am delighted to say, tuberculosis is rapidly declining as a cause of death. We may hope for a day not far off when tuberculosis will be as rare as smallpox.

Unfortunately, we cannot guard against tuberculosis as we do against smallpox. While much work has been done by the laboratories to find a method of inoculating against tuberculosis, the results have not been wholly encouraging. The efforts of the research worker continue, however, and it is probable will be crowned with success.

In talking with a physician the other day, he spoke of a certain remedy, not for tuberculosis, but for some other ailment. The doctor said this is the most expensive medicine used by the profession. It is so expensive, indeed, that poor people can ill afford to pay for it. I am glad to tell you, however, that when it comes to the prevention and cure of tuberculosis, no serious outlay of money is involved. Nature has provided the remedy. The secret lies in the right living. The things that will prevent and cure tuberculosis, are the things that will prevent almost every disease. Sunlight is the great panacea. The germs of tuberculosis exposed to the direct rays of the sun will die in a few hours.

Something To Think About Here And There

For a long time the quiet city of Philadelphia has been disturbed by revelations of widespread "graft" on the part of public officials. The cause of this disturbance was not that the "graft" existed. Everybody knew that it existed. It exists in many other big cities. The cause was merely due to the fact that this corruption was stirred up and exposed.

You, dear reader, have a strong conviction that there is "graft" somewhere in your neighborhood. But you will not get excited about it until someone comes along and exposes it. And, even then, you will not bother your head about the motives of the person who does the exposing.

The Philadelphia situation, however, was enlivened by a new twist. A police official ordered 4800 policemen to submit a complete, itemized report of all money, stocks, bonds, real estate and other property in their possession, together with an explanation as to how they had acquired them.

There is an idea worth thinking about. Is it a good idea or a bad idea? Ought we all to be willing to make public the details of our possessions and to explain how we acquired them? Or ought we to maintain that our private life is sacred? A few years ago the federal government made public the income tax which many individuals paid. There was a storm of protest. The practice was stopped. But, today, many people remembering the figures that were published are wondering how so many "got away with it."

And is a man's property any more sacred than the beer which he drinks. What is sacred in private life? To what extent should any kind of privacy in individual life be safeguarded by law? There you surely have something to think about.

"Biggest High School In City Is Dedicated." That was a headline in a newspaper over the account of the ceremonies attending the "dedication" of a new school in New York City. "Mayor Walker" the account continued, "declared that he was determined to give New York the greatest public school system in the world."

What difference does it make how big a high school is? And what would the "greatest public system in the world" be like? The schools of New York have, in proportion to population, turned out about the same percentage of dumbbells as the schools of all other cities.

What earthly sense is there in measuring educational institutions or systems by such words as "greatest" or "biggest?" We have had public schools in the United States for more than a century. And yet we have bigotry, intolerance, prejudice and vast ignorance of the worthwhile things of life, literature and the fine arts, rampant throughout the country. What is the sense of education unless it educates? To be sure, our country gives its children a better opportunity for learning than other countries do. But if our children do not learn—and God knows they do not give much evidence of learning—would it not be better to lay stress upon the method of education rather than upon the size or capacity of the institution of teaching? Of course, in a great city like New York, it is said to think that a hundred thousand children can find no seats in school. But is it not sadder to think that a million children are turned out from schools, year after year, with more knowledge of baseball than of history, with more taste for the movies than for poetry, with more familiarity with various makes of automobiles than with the English language, and with more ideas of a "good time" than with ideals of worthwhile life?

WEAK, RUN-DOWN

Alabama Lady Could Hardly Lift Her Head. Began To Feel Stronger After Taking Cardui.

Loxley, Ala.—"I was in an awful bad state of health," says Mrs. Charles Jenkins, of this place. "I was all run-down and weak as could be. I did not have the strength of a kitten. Some days I could hardly lift my head from the pillow. "I looked like a skeleton. I was so thin and haggard. It took all my will power to drag myself around the house. I never walked any farther than I had to, for it hurt me to stand on my feet. "My back and sides hurt me until I thought I could not stand it. "I saw myself growing gradually weaker and I did not know what to do. I tried several things but nothing helped me. "One day I read about how other women had been helped by taking Cardui, so I thought I would try it. I found it a splendid medicine. After I began to take it, I soon began to feel stronger and able to do things. "From that time to the present I have taken Cardui several times when I was run-down in health. It has never failed to help me." Cardui should help you, too. Get a bottle today.
