North Carolina ranks among the state first in transportation of school pupils, according to figures compiled by the state department of education, received here. There was a total of 136,960 children in North Carolina provided with transportation facilities in 1927-28. Indiana ranks next to North Carolina in number of children transported, with a total of 113,925. Mecklenburg county transported 3,390 pupils daily; daily mileage of vehicles was 1,501 and vehicles were operated an average of 160 days. The average cost of hauling a pupil in North Carolina is $12 for the year, whereas in Indiana it takes an average of $28 a year to transport a school child. In the United States as a whole 40,876 vehicles were used in transporting 1,154,961 children at a cost of approximately $27,000,000. Rutherford county leads the state with 26 consolidated schools for the white race. Mecklenburg is second in this respect by having 23 schools and Catawba is third, with 20 schools of this type.

New York—The Biblical story of the flood today had the support of material evidence unearthed by science. Returning from an archaeological expedition to Mesopotamia, Prof. C. Leonard Woolley said he had found an eight-foot layer of silt and clay deposited during an overflowing of the Euphrates river and the Biblical deluge. Prof. Woolley headed an expedition of the museum of the University of Pennsylvania and the British museum which with a crew of 160 Arab workmen has been engaged for seven years in excavating the ruins of Ancient Sumeria. Penetrating through a layer of evidence indicating a highly developed civilization of about 4,000 B. C., they suddenly came upon a layer of silt or sand in which all manifestations of human life ceased to exist. Beneath this deposit were utensils in the native fashion and expertly moulded bricks, indicating a high peak of cultural development.
