

AMERICAN INDIAN TRIBE IS TRACED FROM 1000 B. C.

Relics From Nevada Cave Show Redskins Existed Nearly 3,000 Years Ago.

Berkeley, Cal.—Evidence of a prehistoric American Indian tribe, dating back almost 3,000 years to 1,000 B. C., has been discovered in the bat-infected Lovelock Cave in the Humboldt Mountains in Nevada, by University of California anthropologists.

The cavern has been the object of study since 1912. The people who inhabited it are memorialized in legends as Siadukas, "Tule Eaters," by the Plutes legends say the Siadukas were exterminated by the Plutes in a three-year war. Many of the possessions of the ancient people were found in the cave preserved in a state of perfection held equal to that of material found in Egypt and Peru.

The age of the deposits was worked out by Mr. Harrington of the Museum of the American Indian on the basis of the workmanship of the basketware and other articles. Another estimate was made on the basis of debris and bat guano in the bottom of the cave. In places this was fourteen feet deep.

Prof. A. L. Kroeber, member of the expedition, declared "the material was wholly pre-Caucasian. It was obvious on casual inspection that the ancient culture represented had strong relations with the native culture of California in historic times."

A Sermon In A Sentence.

Charlotte News.—One newspaper hits the nail accurately on top when it says that the reason modern youth is showing such little respect for elders is because the elders are entitled to so little of it. That is putting a sermon in a sentence, and it is better to leave it just like it stands than go on and add useless elaborations.

EAST GRAHAM ST.

April 4 1929.

I have wanted a radio for a long time, and have tried out six different sets of radios that are advertised and sold in Shelby and Cleveland county. On account of high voltage lines running almost directly over my house, and a transformer close by every set failed to work until I tried a Philco. I am frank to state that the Philco is giving perfect reception. I firmly believe that the Philco engineers have perfected a radio with power to break through interference. I have never yet heard a radio that would anything like equal the Philco. And think it the best that has ever been offered for sale in this section of the country.
