Some Cosmetics Contain Poison

"Some women apply mixtures to their faces that would take the paint off an automobile," says Dr. Charles W. Pabst, chief dermatologist of the Greenpoint hospital in Brooklyn, New York. Dr. Pabst has issued an appeal for the medical profession and the public to support bills intended to stop the sale of cosmetics containing poisons, now pending in congress and in the legislature of the state of New York.

There has been an increase of at least 50 per cent during the past three years in the number of skin diseases resulting from the use of cosmetics. With the growth of the industry to a point where more than $3,000,000 worth of cosmetics is sold every year, small laboratories have sprung up throughout the nation to manufacture "miracle poisons" guaranteed to do almost anything," Dr. Pabst said.

Frequently, he added, "in order to approximate their advertised purpose" the products of these manufacturers contained poisons such as lead, mercury, or arsenic, and practically all of them were sold without the name of the manufacturer appearing on the container. One of the products of this type in which poison was frequently used, he said, was face powder which it was claimed would not rub off.

If such a powder were used in large quantities over a long period of time lead poisoning would be the result; but even if used only in small quantities, the lead in it was apt to cause eczema or dermatitis, he went on. Often, he said, in the case of products "guaranteed not to rub off," the "remover" which was provided by the manufacturer for his own product, was more dangerous than the product itself.

Many of these "removers," he explained, contained alcohol in too strong a solution, or even ether, and it was these mixtures "that would take the paint off an automobile." Cosmetics, he pointed out, included practically all mixtures and products applied externally to the body, and men used them in the form of shaving preparations, hair tonics, and similar products.

He went on to say that many re-

Mysterious Disease Worry In Canada

Number Of Deaths Already Resulted From Epidemic; Baffles Authorities.

Melbourne, Ont.—Stringent health regulations went into effect in Eikfield township where residents have become alarmed over a mysterious disease that has caused four deaths and much illness.

School sessions, church services, entertainments and public funerals were ordered suspended by the township board of health until May 1. Persons ill with the disease were ordered quarantined and those who have been in contact with the disease were ordered inoculated.

Although the nature of the malady has not been determined, its symptoms were said to indicate black diphtheria. Cultures have been forwarded to the Institute of Public Health and meanwhile all subjects

200,000 MORE EMPLOYED THAN YEAR AGO, DAVIS SAID

Washington.—Secretary Davis estimated that 200,000 more workers are employed in the United States now than were on payrolls one year ago. The calculation was based on labor department figures and upon a special canvass undertaken in Baltimore as a representative point.

Only the building industry, he said, was falling to show much advance in employment. One of the reasons for that, he suggested, was "high interest rates which have temporarily halted borrowing by municipalities and other to finance construction."

Four Deaths.
 The four deaths occurred in two neighboring families, all the victims dying a few hours after being seriously ill and numerous sore throats have been reported.

The first victim was Miss Barbara Sinclair, who at first was thought to have died of blood poisoning resulting from a cut hand sustained in opening a jar of fruit. Her mother, Mrs. Douglad Sinclair, died yesterday afternoon en route to a hospital after a few hours' illness. Daniel Brown, who had attended the funeral of Miss Sinclair, died after twelve hours' illness, and his nine-year-old brother, William, died after an illness of six hours.

Rutherford County Hens.
 From The Rutherford Sun.
 R. A. Callahan, who lives in Rutherfordton, recently sold a hen that tipped the scales at an even 12 pounds. The chicken was a White Orpington and was raised by the seller. Another hen, weighing 11 pounds, was sold at the same time, the combined weight being 23 pounds. This is believed to be a record for the county. Mr. Callahan stated that he had six chickens of the same breed that weighed 55 pounds each. Rutherford county has gained an enviable record for the fine chickens raised, and many thousands of pounds of poultry have been shipped to Northern markets, but it is doubted if any hen shipped weighed as much as 12 pounds.

1/5 MORE COTTON

By applying 3 1/2 times as much potash to cotton as formerly, 296 farmers in 11 states averaged 1/5 more cotton. They obtained an average return of $5.50 in extra seed cotton for each $1 invested in extra potash on both clay and sandy soils.
