At The Theatres

At last Al Jolson has arrived in Shelby. The Webb is advertising "The Singing Fool," starring this celebrated comedian for a four day run, beginning today. It was this picture, together with "The Jazz Singer," both of them Jolson pictures, that did more to put the Vitaphone over to the public than anything else. Shelby has long looked forward to seeing "The Singing Fool," reputed to be one of the best screen productions ever made.

Clara Bow, the "It" girl is the headliner at the Princess today. She appears in one of Elinor Glynn's peppy productions "Three Week Ends." This story is a sort of sequel to Mrs. Glynn's celebrated "Three Weeks." This new story is the last word in up-to-dateness, as Clara is the last word in modern appeal on the screen. It is a well directed and well acted production, designed for the edification of old and young. Advertised as coming this week is "The Woman They Talk About," with Irene Rich.

Noted Military Unit To Regain

First Virginia Regiment, Oldest Organization In Country, Formally Recognized.

Richmond, Va.—The oldest regiment in America, organized in 1680, nearly 100 years before the American war of independence, has been revived after a brief period of lost identity.
The First Virginia regiment, bearing the stars and scars of every American war, is recreated by a War Department order authorizing a change of designation, and no longer is the 13rd Infantry, Virginia National Guard, the appellation given it directly after the world war.

The famous regiment was organized in 1680 as the Henrico County militia unit and through stern necessity became the frontier army of the Virginia colony. The records show that at one time every able-bodied man in the county, which embraced a very large area, was a member of the organization.
In 1754 the First Virginia was one of the most important Colonial units sent to resist encroachments of the French upon Virginia territory at the Ohio River. George Washington then was lieutenant colonel and later became colonel. Most of the men were borderers, dressed in buckskin and armed with small-bore, long-barreled pieces which became known as rifles because of the twisted grooves in the barrels.

The Virginians became renowned in this French and Indian war along the Ohio largely because of their conduct with Braddock's command. When the Revolution began the regiment became a regular outfit with Patrick Henry as its colonel. The records reveal that the regiment became one of the strongest units in the continental service.
The First Virginia became the official guard of the new city of Richmond when that town was incorporated in 1792. It stood to arms in the war of 1812 and in the Mexican war. In 1851 it included such famous organizations as the Grays, the Blues, the Dragoons, the Fayette Artillery, the Eagle Infantry, the Caledonian Guards, the Young Guard and the Montgomery Guard.

The war between the states saw the First Virginia assigned to Kemper's brigade in the army of Northern Virginia. Throughout the war the regiment kept its organization. Hundreds were killed but its ranks were continually filled by volunteers proud to march under its standard.
The First Virginia was reorganized in 1871 its personnel largely composed of veterans. It was mustered into service again in the war with Spain and was reorganized in 1900. The campaign in Mexico in 1916-17 found the First Regiment in the garb of battle.

The regiment was known as the 116th Infantry of the 29th Division during the world war and fought through the Meuse-Argonne and the campaign in Alsace.
After the latest war, wedded to the Richmond Light Infantry Blues, the organization became the 133rd Infantry under the army reorganization plan. Colonel J. Fulmer Bright, of Richmond, was given the command, which he still holds. It was largely through his efforts that the First Virginia obtained again its original name.

At The Theatres

A Rumanian woman who wanted to divorce her English husband gave as her reason that "Englishmen did not know how to love." The presiding judge agreed and commented that "as love was primarily essential to a happy marriage, the Englishman's innate inability to bestow it justified the complainant's request for a divorce."

Horned Toad Found Near Forest City

Forest City—A horned toad was found by M. F. Wall, of this city, in his home. These peculiar little reptiles resemble very much the common lizards and sandlappers common to this section of the state, with the exception of the horns on its head. The toad, which had six horns, is seldom found in this section, as it frequents the arid and sandy plains of the southwest.

Hen Afflicted With Rabies In Davidson?

Lexington—Whether a chicken can really contract or transmit rabies is a problem that is giving some concern to Mrs. Henry Shaw, of the Holly Grove community, four miles east of here. A hen that was afflicted with what resembled fits "bit" Mrs. Shaw several days ago, she reported to a local physician this action of the hen. It pecked her on a finger and she sought advice as to whether she should take the Pasteur treatment as a precaution.

Raskob Has Sheme For Little Fellow

His whole idea, as he explained it, is to give the "little fellow," who cannot save very much a chance to make his savings account.
Briefly, his plan is to enable the "little fellow," to buy himself an estate on the installment plan, as he now is buying his automobile. It is modeled somewhat after the investment trust idea combined with the General Motor Acceptance corporation, which he organized 10 years ago. His investment company would furnish the investment. His "acceptance corporation" would advance the money for the purchase of the investment, somewhat as the General Motors Acceptance corporation advances money for the purchase of automobiles. The stock would be paid for on the installment plan.

Raskob Has Sheme For Little Fellow

Mr. Raskob said the plan now is in a formative state only. He may never carry it out at all or he may do so in the next year. So far, he said, he has only talked it over with economists and bankers, whose identities he declined to reveal.
His investment company would invest only in common stocks standard industrial organizations. There would be no speculating "buying for selling"—he said, and the company would not be permitted to go into debt. Thus, in case of a temporary slump in the nation prosperity, there would be no danger of its assets being wiped out. And the company would endeavor to control the market price of its stock to prevent fictitious valuations. The selling price of its stock would be held down to its actual value.
Operating alongside this company but separately, would be the "acceptance corporation." The investor could borrow money from this corporation to pay for the stocks in the investment company, using the stock as collateral, and paying off the indebtedness by the month.

Home Run Leader Old Days Wants Crack At New Ball Place Of Honor

Chicago.—Back in the days when a home run was a national event instead of a yawn, Frank Schulte was a home run king. Years ago that was, before the lively ball danced its dreadful way into pitchers' nightmares.

"Wildfire," claimed now by age, the automobile business and California sunshine was coming around out at Cub park recently, looking wistfully at the present peppy ball. "In my time fans went to see the great pitchers work," he observed. "Positive announcement that Christy Mathewson, Mordecai Brown, Ed Walsh or one of half a dozen others would pitch brought out a big crowd.

"Now they go to see Babe Ruth or Rogers Hornsby or Hack Wilson or some great hitter. Perhaps the lively ball has done it."
There was a touch of regret in his voice. What he might have done to that ball! Had it only come sooner.

"I'd just like to see Nap Lajoie clouting the present ball," he wished.
Schulte thinks the Cubs are pennant winners—and here's why: "When I was a youngster we were going pretty hot. I think we won 116 games that year, more than any team had ever won or has since.

"There was a lot of stuff in the papers comparing our team to the famous Anson team of 20 years before. It used to burn me up. I thought our outfit was pretty good, with Tinker, Evers, Chance, Pat Moran and others.

"Some day," I said, "I'll be an old timer and has-been and the Cubs will have another good team. If anybody asks me then to compare that team with ours I'm going to say we never were as good as the new team!"
"So that's why I think the 1929 Cubs are the best of them all and sure to grab the pennant."

AMERICAN EAGLE REMOVED FROM FLOOR OF BAR ROOM
Havana.—A controversy between members of the Havana Post of the American legion and proprietors of a new Havana bar room over use of American silver dollars as floor tiling in the saloon, was settled by the removal of the dollars from the floor.

The matter had been referred to the American embassy here with the request that a formal protest be entered with the Cuban state department. "Desecration of the American eagle," was the charge.

FIDDLING FOR FISHING WORMS

The Pathfinder.
"Fiddling for worms" is the name given to an old method used by the stake. Similar results are some within a radius of 20 or 25 feet of fishermen to induce anglegworms to come to the surface.

A stake or piece of board is driven into the ground and a raspy or shuddering vibration is produced by drawing an iron bar of a board over the stake or upright piece. In a short time earthworms begin to emerge from the earth times obtained by merely tapping or hammering on the ground in a place where there are evidences of the presence of worms. An electrical process consists of vibrating the soil by sending a current through two rods connected by wires.

Scientists are not agreed as to what causes the worms to emerge from the agitated ground. Earthworms are very sensitive to vibrations in the earth and if they happen to be on the surface the least jar will send them to their burrows. The worms may come to the surface to escape the vibration; or they may, as one authority supposes, mistake the vibration for that produced by rain. It has been also suggested that the worms may mistake the disturbance for that caused by their worst enemy, the mole.

Whether the so-called fiddling process is successful depends on the species of worm and the character of the soil.

CHESTER'S WEATHER MAN STEPS UP TO TAKE BOWS

Chester.—Admirers of J. Martin Grant, Chester county's famous long-distance weather forecaster, have been congratulating him on the accuracy with which his forecast of January, 1927, predicted the rains and storms of the first few months of 1929. He predicted plenty of rain for 1928, which came true. He predicts that the rains will soon edge off and that an average crop year is at hand. Forecaster Grant says there is some interesting weather in store during the summer months, which he will report on in detail soon.
