Shelby Outfield Was Wide-Awake As Crying Babies?

The Concord sportswriter who covered the Winston-Shelby game for his paper paid several high compliments to the Shelby players in his story of the game in the Concord times.

Speaking of the local outfield he said: "Hamrick's supporting outfield was as wide-awake as a crying baby!"

In another paragraph: "If all the Winston players had followed the example of Clodfelter, the Shelby team would never have gotten any nearer to Chapel Hill than Concord. Clodfelter rapped his bat around three of Hamrick's buzzers, one sailing to leftfield fence for a double."

"Poston," the writer continued, "socked a double in the ninth and circled the bases for a fluke. Come run as the Tobacco City boys played mumble peg in the mud."

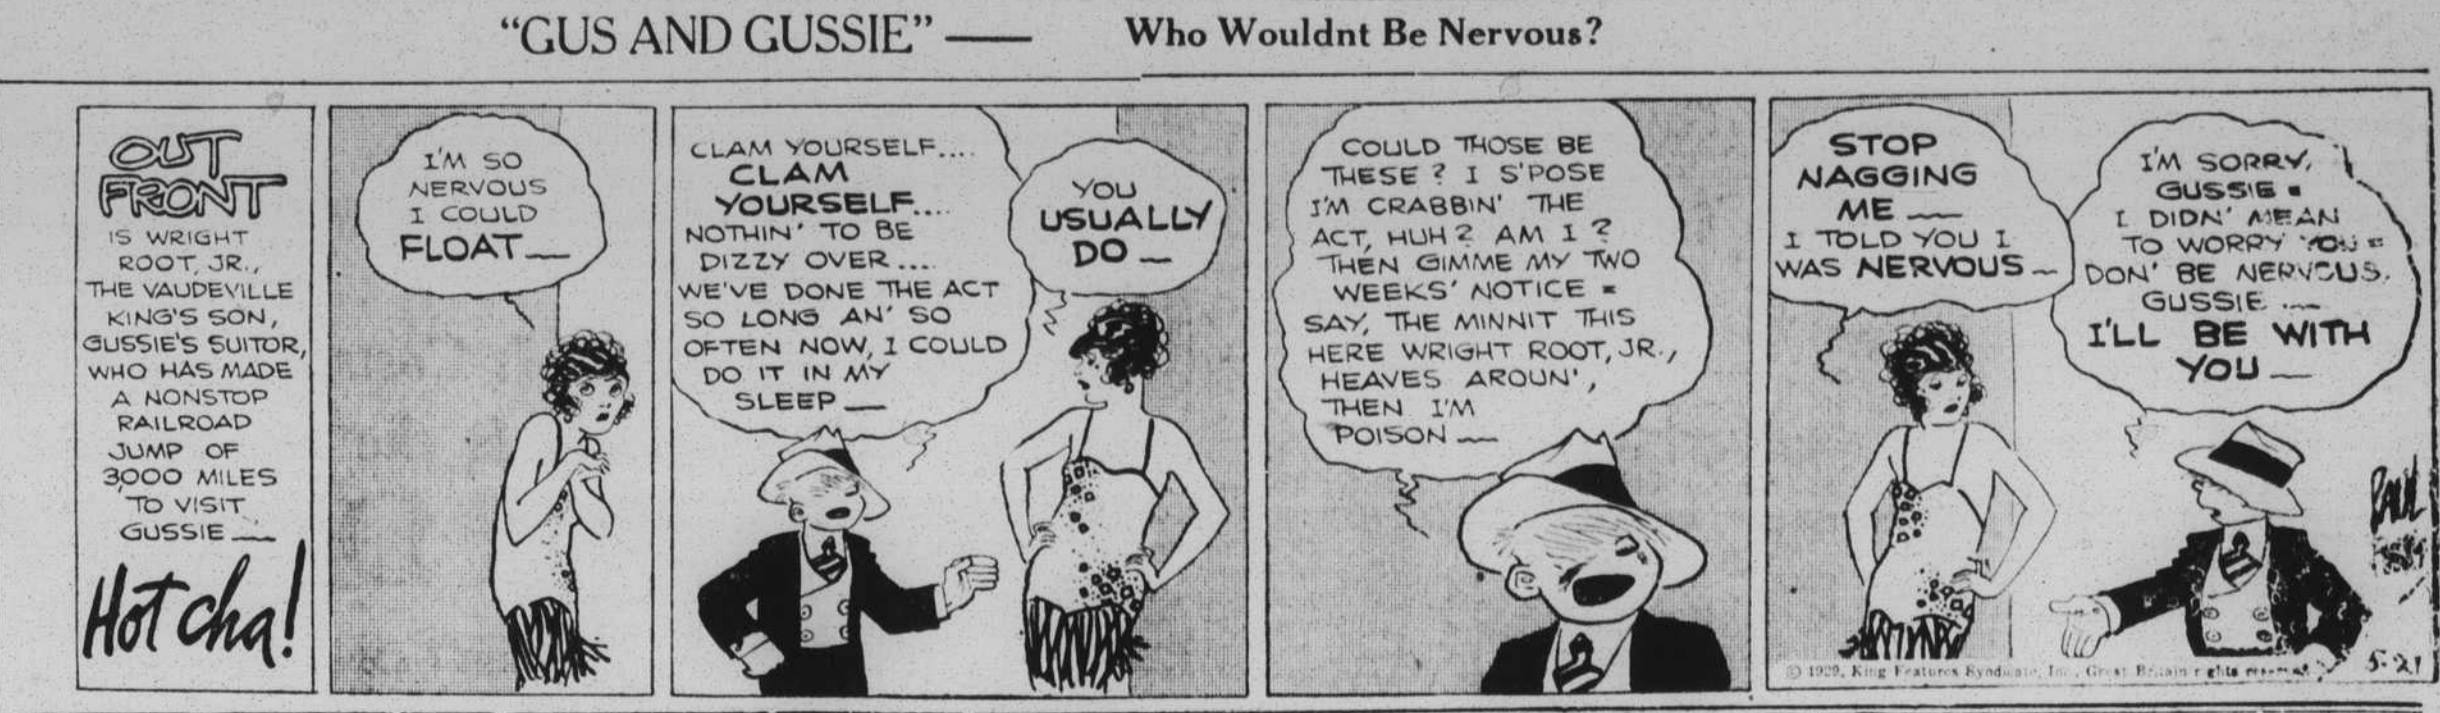

Praising Lee, Referring to Lee the story said: "Lee, captain and shortstop, was in the thick of the fielding with plenty of highclass acting. He took care of seven chances with only one error, and all were hard chances. He brought the crowd to its feet with rapture in the seventh frame when he leaped into the sky and brought down a liner."

MILLION FIST FIGHTS EACH YEAR IN RUSSIA IS RECORD

Moscow.—Russians engage in a million fist fights each year, in which, quite naturally, at least two million persons take part, according to Dr. Lebovitch of the Moscow Institute of Criminology.

Official statistics show that in Moscow alone there were 1,044 persons hurt in fights during March, 1928, and 1,693 in April. The increase in the latter was due to Easter holidays' vodka.

The statisticians even gave social correlation to the fighters. They said 35 per cent were neighbors, 15 per cent husbands, six per cent former husbands, seven per cent relatives, six per cent "friends," five per cent acquaintances and 26 per cent perfect strangers.

Some Farming On Lee Street, Shelby

To The Editor:

The people of Cleveland county have become enthused so much over our farming governor's proclamation to the people of his county to grow 75,000 bales of cotton by the time his term expires. The people of his county are planting cotton along the highway and hedges, are making an effort to grow the above amount in this good year and finally reach 100,000 bales by the expiration of his term. We are proud that Cleveland county has given to this good state their first agricultural governor at a time most needed.

A governor that says he "wants to lift the occupation of farming from its lowly and meek habitation to a higher plane of profession and encourage our younger people back to the farm, that they may be recognized as in any other honorable occupation."

The people on Lee street are so much enthused over farming that Bass Suttle plowed up a 15 acre field of daisies. (Oh! that beautiful field of daisies.) Inspired by our governor's plan of scientific farming, Bass is a large farmer, and owns several farms. He wants to employ a man who has been superintendent of a cotton mill, for his general farm manager. A man trained from boyhood how to manufacture cotton would know how to grow it. He wants to farm in cotton scientifically. Mr. Suttle, I am sorry you destroyed that field of daisies. No prettier sight can be seen when that field was in bloom and the flowers turning toward the sun as it was sinking in the great western horizon. The beauty of these flowers gave rest to my weary soul and body. They would lift me out of sordid thinking into higher planes of heavenly thinking where men forget themselves in striving to help others and where the pretty selfishness of little things is burned up in the fiery zeal out of which martyrs are made. I suppose you did this from the inspiration you had gotten from our governor's plan of scientific farming. He has recently appointed a politician and lawyer to be general farm manager of the state's two large farms. This lawyer was formerly or until recently attorney for the state highway commission. His service was needed there no longer. He was made general manager of these farms to have scientific farming done. A great encouragement for master farming. It seems a wise appointment to have a lawyer who has studied and practiced law to supervise the farming on these large farms. If the question should come before the council of state which did the most damage potato bugs or bean beetles, this lawyer could estimate the damage scientifically.

The state's two large farms will be well supervised. Each farm has a superintendent. They must have some supervision. Superintendent of state prison, lawyer and politician, has some supervision over the farms. All time chairman of board of directors, he a lawyer and real estate dealer, has some supervision over the farms. The general farm manager, lawyer and politician, has supervision over the other supervisors.

Mr. Suttle in doing scientific farming, it seems to take excessive supervision. You may need another supervisor for your farms. I would like to suggest to you to get a Chinaman. I still regret you destroyed that field of daisies. Cotton will not look good like the daisies, for cotton takes work while daisies grow without work. But we are scientific now. Dr. Dorton has recently gotten so scientifically with his fine riding horses, he can ride along the Southern railroad, his horses counts the cross-ties for him. Dr. is almost persuaded to believe scientifically that he can make a five gaited saddle horse out of Charlie Doggett's gray mule.

It seems that science has changed the way in which we get knowledge of farming, not so much in taking courses in the study of agriculture and experience but take a course in law and politics to make expert farmers. It seems our high school should change its teaching of boys cotton club work and teach them law. Change the pig clubs into political clubs. Mr. Suttle, don't get so scientific that you won't plant any watermelon seeds in the cotton you planted where you plowed up that beautiful field of daisies. The rain held up planting for two weeks. We begun to think this county would not make 75,000 bales this year, but the rain ceased, everybody is planting, we hope to reach our expectation. But ole Aunt Malinda blackened our hopes. She says, "We all dis planted on de wrong tim' of de moon" and we will not make much cotton. But we hope ole Aunt Malinda is fooled on this moon business, that we will exceed our governor's expectation for us this year in production of that wonderful plant, cotton—what a royal plant it is. The world waits in attention on its growth; the showers that fall, whispering on its leaves, are heard around the earth; the sun that shines on it is tempered by the prayers of all people. Its fibre is current in every bank and when loosing its fleece to the sun, it floats a sunny flower that glorifies the field of the humble farmer.

Signed: "FLOWBOY"
