something started. "A class D league could be formed with Hickory, Gastonia, Statesville, Concord, Lexington and Shelby as the entries. With the support of the neighboring sections, each city could support a team.

"If the proposed western Carolina league is formed for next season, the cities of the group will have an unusually good opportunity of turning the clubs into major league minor camps, such as Salisbury, Rocky Mount, and Columbia.

"Word from reliable sources indicates that several major league clubs are seeking class D teams for next season, and because of the large number of baseball prospects in this section for future big league players, the majors would be more than interested in taking charge of the situation in a number of cities of this section. The park for these league games would, of course, have to be furnished by the citizens of the cities represented in the cir-
