Thinks Argument On Road Routing Ought Not Go To Church

Asks People Of Lower Cleveland Not To Get Too Wrought Up Over Route 18.

To the Editor:

Just a few lines in regard to the routing of highway 18, and I want to state in the beginning I'm not putting up an argument for either route. The road will be just as near me on the direct route as by Earl, therefore I am not arguing the road. But what I wish to impress on the minds of the people of lower Cleveland is this: We are carrying this road business too far. Some are saying things that ought not to be said, things hard to forget. I'm sure this is done thoughtfully. We all want this highway as near us as possible. We all have the same rights, therefore we should have more regard for the feelings of others. There is getting to be too much strife among our people over this road. I believe if we would all work together and cooperate, we would all get more benefit out of the road after we get it. And I'm sure we would feel much better over it. Governor Gardner will see that Cleveland county gets as many hard surface roads as are needed. At least we are expecting him to do all he can for us.

And my good people, lets leave this road business at home on Sunday when we go to church, and Sunday school, if we don't its going to ruin our services. No one is benefited who goes to church and has his feeling hurt, by some unthoughtful person. Lets not go to church to build highway 18, but to worship God. Please, lets forget the road while we are at church. MRS. W. A. RANDALL, Blacksburg, S. C., R-1

WANTED NEGRO ON COMMISSION

Only One Dissenting Voice To Hoover's Selections For Crime Body.

By JOHN A. LIVINGSTONE.

Washington.—The only dissenting voice to President Hoover's selection for the national crime commission comes from the Washington Tribune, a negro weekly. It objects because no negro was placed on the commission.

If dry leaders like Bishop Cannon and F. McBride Scott were free to speak their minds, they would register objection to many of the selections, but their hands are tied. They must go along with President Hoover. They gave every encouragement to his candidacy, and many voted for him, and they cannot turn their back on him at the very beginning of his administration.

The wet leaders are mildly pleased with most of the selections. No outstanding wets were placed on it, but it is moister than they had hoped for. The commission could have been much worse from that standpoint.

The big reason, though, for the comparatively lukewarm reception given to the appointment of the commission by both dries and wets has been the changed attitude of the president. During the campaign he proposed to have a commission that would investigate the prohibition question. This was interpreted by the dries to mean he would undertake better enforcement, and by the wets as meaning that he would favor repeal, if a commission found that the law is unenforceable.

Broadens Scope. By the time President Hoover was inaugurated, he had broadened his views of the commission's work. It was to take in not only prohibition but all laws. It would take in the whole field of crime. Prohibition is just an element.

It will be at least one year, and probably two, before the commission submits its report, and when it does, there will be only a section dealing with prohibition. There will be a score of other sections dealing with other laws. The whole thing will be dumped upon congress with a commendatory word from the president. Congress will act upon such sections as it wishes, and leave the other alone.

While it is anticipated that the commission will make valuable recommendations and that congress will receive much needed information, it is no longer expected that anything revolutionary about prohibition will come from it.

It is considered of large significance that in the recent discussions of the prohibition question it is taken for granted that the 18th amendment is here to stay. Senator Borah's contention that nobody has a right to advocate repeal of the Volstead law unless he offers something that he considers better in its place is being accepted. While efforts are made to keep alive the factional fight within the

STUDENTS WORKING THEIR WAY EXCELL OTHERS

Rochester, N. Y.—Students working their way through the University of Rochester have attained a higher scholastic standing than those who have had all their time to devote to their studies, according to a survey of the men's class of 1928 by Professor Charles W. Watkeys of the mathematics department.

Seventy per cent of those who answered the professor's questionnaire were employed, but attained an average grade in their studies of 75.07 per cent, while the 30 per cent who did no outside work had an average of 71.56 per cent.

Getting By.

Albemarle Press. "Anything above 70 of course 's wasted energy," said a youth the other day. "All I want to do is to get by." He could have been a college student or it is possible that he was still in high school. In any case, he was the type of youth Governor Gardner was discussing last week in an address before the graduating class of the Shelby high school. Said the governor: "Just getting by is taking a tremendous toll of young Americans today. If you want to attain something and want to badly enough, you can, but if you are of the get-by type, you will not want to and cannot attain."

The get-by type may be found, not only among students but likewise among professional and business men. We find men in every walk of life who are satisfied to let things "drag along" as long as they get by.

The United States owes her tremendous growth and progress to the millions of men and women who were not satisfied with just getting by. They have wanted to do things just a little better than the rest, and they were happy if they could do this. The eternal "push" on the parts of these people has placed the United States at the head of the list.

Young graduates can absorb a great message from Governor Gardner's word. What he said was true, and youth will find that Age has not erred in this profound truth.

Oddities.

Bees are sometimes afflicted with paralysis. Some Pacific cables lie six miles below the ocean surface. There is only one per cent of unemployment in Holland. Constantinople has more fires than any other city its size. Fort Bragg, N. C., has the largest artillery range in the world. A new building in London is made of polished black granite. The United States' smallest record is exceeded only in India. Salt water is a better conductor of electricity than fresh water. Queen Elizabeth of Belgium is an enthusiastic amateur photographer. More than 8,000,000 persons have ascended the Washington monument. El Salvador is the most densely populated republic in the western world. Deer sinews and tiger bones are used in China in preparing tonics for invalids.
