How Producer In Airplane Lifted Prairie Cinderella From Obscurity

And Now Nebraska Maid Of Nineteen Is Right On Broadway.

They are telling along Broadway a Cinderella-like tale that, if it came from one of those mimeograph operators known as press representatives, would be shouted down with cries of "wolf." This time, however, it happens to be true, so let's get on with the story.

One day last Spring John Murray Anderson was flying over Nebraska for business reasons, which perhaps, are the best reasons one could have for flying over Nebraska. The plane was forced down in some small Nebraska town, and the producer took advantage of an enforced holiday by going to the local motion picture house.

It was an intimate little theatre, with an old-fashioned and time-honored upright piano substituting for an orchestra. Seated at the piano was Ann Pennington, or Mr. Anderson thought it was Ann Pennington. On the other hand, it could not have been Ann, because she does not play the piano, a matter which Anderson recalled in time to restrain himself from greeting the girl like an old friend.

But he greeted her, none the less, and learned she was Henrietta Henri, the theatre owner's daughter, never had passed Nebraska's borders, but had not abandoned all hope. Of course, or there would not be any story, she was asked if she would like to come to New York to appear in a show. She would, and did, a month ago, and now she is living in the apartment of the same Ann Pennington whom she resembles so much.

Miss Henri is learning to dance, and will dance, sing, play and celeste and be shot through the heart by Keating, the magician in "Murray Anderson's Almaraz," when that show opens. All of which will not be a bad night's start for a seventeen-year-old girl who two months ago did not know she looked like somebody else.

Upper County Folks Find No Benefit In Farm Agent

To the commissioners and citizens of Cleveland county:

After reading Mr. Crowder's letter in the Star, with which we agree heartily, we have been constrained to investigate the sentiment of the people in No. 9 township in regard to retaining a county farm agent in the near future. People in No. 9 are not chronic kickers nor objectors to taxation that brings adequate returns for money well spent. Our governor who is already known as one of the most outstanding governors in the United States, has been very solicitous for wiser expenditure of tax money as well as substantial reduction in the amount of taxes.

I have made a thorough canvass of farm owners in this township, and wish to be fair with all parties consulted. We are listing below the names of those who testify that they have received benefits from the services of the agent and also those who say they do not even know him or have received nothing from the service.

Mrs. L. E. Stacy says that Dr. Gidney terraced her land and that Mr. Hardin pruned her fruit trees and saved them from becoming a loss.

Mr. V. A. Gardner says that four hundred of his chickens were saved through following the advice of the farm agent.

Six or eight others testify that the agent had given his advice and assistance in culling their chickens; viz. G. S. Royster, Earney Elliot, John R. Gantt, D. F. Beam, Winslow Wright, Will Yelton, Gettys Bingham.

R. W. Wilson says he derived special benefit from the farm agent.

The following citizens say that they are not acquainted with nor have received any benefits whatever from the service: Homer Beam, Stough Beam, Tommy Cline, H. S. Cline, James Cline, Will Wright, W. A. Wright, Walter Selph, R. A. Bingham, Bert Bingham, R. S. Carpenter, Avery Wright, T. M. Sweezy, J. A. Wright, Marion Gantt, Lee A. Gantt, Henry Gantt, Richard Tillman, John Tillman, Monroe Willis, C. D. Dellinger, John Peeler, George Martin, Joe Lutz, M. L. Lutz, A. C. Lutz, A. W. Brackett, J. W. Brackett, W. C. Edwards, S. A. Stamey, P. L. Peeler, A. A. Wilson, Ed Wright. All of the people named above are land owners.

A great number of these people expressed their opinion that the county welfare office could be dispensed with along with the farm agent and that the hospital should be aided with funds that have been used for the two offices mentioned above. We suggest that other townships take similar means of finding out the sentiment of the people in their respective communities. Very truly yours, W. A. GANTT
