

IKE'S TALE

Deer Star Readers:

I'll say hit as hadn't orttu, but Sal is one of the dadburnest women that I ever married in my life. We got up a little argument tuther nite about a woman that I like purty good, and the first thing I knowed that dickens of a Sal nailed me by the hair of the head and drug me outen the house and shut the door on me and I had to sleep in a briar patch that nite fur away from friends and loved ones.

I despise to be dun no such a way as that, but I want hit tu go on record that I am the best man of the two and she can't handle me around no such a way when I'm sober and had my meals regular. Suntime along in the nite hit begun tu rain and I was not happy out thar in the wilderness alone with no company but a clear conscience. I stood hit purty well fur awhile an then I fetched loose and cussed sum. I cussed Sal and everybody else that wuz akin tu her, an the more I cussed the better I felt fur hit wuz all deservin.

I wish now I had cussed 'em more than I did fur hit is powerful satisfying attar hit's all over with. Hit's my boost thar I never have been out-cussed when I git rite down tu business, only two men has ever up tu this time—one wuz a lawyer, of course, tuther one wuz a reale estate agent. I wish I had my life tu live over again so I could do just exactly like I have done, or else I'd be one of these little recorder court lawyers and set around with specs on and try tu make folks think I wuz smart. Sal use tu think I wuz smart back before we wuz married, but I'll be durned if she hadn't found out better by this time.

Thars Bill an Gus Richard, both of 'em runs with me an we just about average I reckon, yit they just keep their wives fooled up the whole time and they wont tell how they do hit. I offered one time to pay 'em 15 cents tu tell how they dont hit, but Gus winked at Bill and shook his head an Bill wouldn't tell.

When they git drunk their folks lets 'em lie on the bed and tells hit around that—"Gus an Bill is sick—they're purty bad off today." But just let me git drunk an come home an pretend tu be "sick," an the first thing I know Sal has piled me out on the ground or in sum briar patch, an rite thar I remaineth until in the fullness of time Sal comes an administers tu me an sends me forth into a sinful world, a new critter, as it were. Well times is purty tough up here at Casar but nothing tu compare with Polkville and the surrounding country. Hits goin tu be a close shave with me an Sal tu make connections with winter time—I may have tu git outan go tu preachin as that is about the only job thars an money in while Sheriff Allen and Bob Kendrick stays around. We got up agin hit this way once before and Sal gin me an appointment, so that she could git her a dress and some things, with the money they give me—but when I got tu the church the folks loved I went hit tu preach. Sal got mad and told 'em I wuz about as fit tu preach as a lawyer wuz tu teach a bible class at Sunday school. IKE.

Buy A Coffin In Which To Bury Foot

Albemarle Press: Raymond Stokes, 17-year-old lad of Denton who has been working in the Story saw mill at Newsum, is in the Tally-Brunson hospital minus a foot. The pedal extremity was cut off Tuesday morning by a circular saw while the boy was attending to his duties.

This morning the boy's twin brother entered a store here and requested a coffin. When asked the dimensions he made know his want and they were smaller than one might believe a child could be. On being questioned he explained it was for his brother's foot.

The foot is to be buried thereby alleviating some of the pain naturally following the severing of the foot. He got the casket and Raymond is doing nicely.
