

At The Theatres

Richard Barthelmess, the little Napoleon of the films, in his latest "Dras"—described as "better than Weary River," is the offering today and tomorrow at the Webb. Alice Day and Lila Lee find a new and heretofore unknown Lila Lee it is—add to the strength of the cast. The New York Evening World says of the film: "You are going to like his newest talking picture. It is one of those taut little plays that warms the heart and catches at the throat. The audience burst into handclapping. I should like to nominate it for a mythical Pulitzer Prize for Talkies."

The Princess theatre is offering for Monday and Tuesday a special return engagement of the famous Paramount spectacle "Wings."

There have been a number of requests for the management to bring this super production back so the date has been arranged and the picture opened to good crowds this afternoon. The three leading characters of "Wings" need no introduction to Shelby picture fans for the popularity of Clara Bow, Buddy Rogers and Richard Arlen exceeds the popularity of any trio of stars in this community.

Those who saw "Wings" before will want to see it again and those who have not witnessed this mighty triumph of motion picture skill should avail themselves of this opportunity.

No Lion Pelt.

Washington—S. T. Davis, of Lynchburg, Va., has decided to pet no more lions. He climbed a fence in National Zoological Park and was lacerated by one paw. Another tore his trousers. He drove away declining medical aid. The lion was one of two presented to Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Coolidge by citizens of Johannesburg and in turn given to the zoo.

Around Our TOWN Shelby SIDELIGHTS

By RENN DRUM

WHICH SIDE OF THE CLEVELAND COUNTY COURT HOUSE IS the front side?

Don't giggle and think it a silly question. Just ponder on it a minute and you'll not crack a smile.

A big part of uptown Shelby has been debating that question for a day or so and a majority of them are no closer together on the answer than are Bishop Cannon and Johnny Raskob. Fact is, there are very few subjects, from the proper time to split cord-wood to international problems, that some of the wise boys about the court house cannot answer, but this one, if you take it from us, has 'em stumped.

Try to answer it yourself, then advance the proof for your answer. One day last week a visiting photographer was in town. He wanted a photo of the state's most beautiful court square, or rather of the court house. He met J. B. Smith, welfare officer, in the corridor. "Mr. Smith," he said, "I want to make a photo of the court house, which is the front side?"

"Why, it's the uh, ah-uhh-h—" and there Mr. Smith stopped, although he started his answer as if you knew what he was going to say. "Now, isn't that funny? Me here working in it and can't tell which is the front?"

Then Mr. Smith noticed another one of the county officers and hailed him: "Say, tell us which side of the court house is the front side?"

"That's easy," the other official answered. "It's the uh—" but it wasn't so easy, and another man was stumped.

Mr. Smith then moved over to The Star office.

"You fellows are erroneously considered to know everything. Which side of the court house is the front side?"

There happened to be four news hounds present, and they gave four different answers. There are four sides to the court house, and insofar as The Star is concerned every side must be the front side.

Some argue that the east side is the front side because all big public buildings, like Solomon's temple, face the east. Others say it is the west side because the Confederate monument was placed on that side—and it is a good argument. Still others contend that the north side is the front side, because the court auditorium is so arranged that the judge faces the north entrance, and judges usually face the main entrance. Those upholding the north side also point out that the cupola which holds the big town clock is erected more on the north wing, yet the clock has four faces.

No one, so far as the column is concerned, has upheld the south side. From the architectural standpoint the east and west sides are identical, while the north and south sides are of the same pattern. The porticos over the porches on the east and west sides have in raised letters the name of the county, "Cleveland County," and that fact indicates that either of the two sides might be the front side, as the porticos on both the east and west are larger than those on the north and south. The hallway, or corridor entrances from all four sides are exactly alike. Somehow, though, it seems as if the west side has the better of the argument, because it is said that the front of the old court house faced the west, and the monument is also there.

This department can't keep from thinking the north side is the front side, holding the west side as second choice. The fellow who can settle the argument and prove his theory will be doing a favor.

Explanation of the club motto was given by Mrs. Wallace, home agent. Life she said was largely presided over by four controls—head, heart, hand, health, and the meaning of these four H's constitute the basis upon which all club work is founded. After explaining something of how this was done, she ended by showing the hyphen in the 4-H motto stands for cooperation "for" she said. "As the motto is incomplete without the hyphen, that ties the 4 and H, so is a club incomplete without cooperation." Evelyn Dixon told of the trip to Raleigh, and the program for the day.

Emma Jane Kendrick told of the sight seeing in town. Mary Hamrick of classwork, and demonstrated a handbag they made at the short course school.

Kathleen Boggs told of the trip to the penitentiary and Dix Hill. Estelle Barber told of the state health course, and the health pageant.

Vera Arrowood told of the camp fire and candle service. Next officers were elected. Junior Daggerham, president; Kathleen Boggs, secretary; C. DePriest, treasurer; Miss Julia McDaniel and Mr. E. L. Dillingham, county leaders. Mr. Dillingham, as leader, for the day took charge and led yell. Mary Hamrick led the songs. The favorite one being "Molly Malone."

Lunch was spread, watermelons sliced, then the campfire. The boys piled brush, the two county leaders lighted the fire from candles brought from the Raleigh short course, then the girls and boys who went to Raleigh lighted their candles from the campfire and lighted those of the other members, who had gathered around in a circle. When all were lighted the club pledge was given in concert, after which we adjourned.

I pledge:

My head to clearer thinking.
My heart to greater loyalty.
My hands to larger service.
My health to better living.

For my community, my club and my country.

SICK? INTO THE DANCE, ORDER AMAZON "DOCS"

Chicago.—Dancing isn't something for the older generation to waggle its head over in the jungles along the Amazon—it's the doctor's prescription for what ails you, reports Llewellyn Williams, member of the Captain Marshall Field expedition to that region.

The doctors, or medicine men, dose out dancing for the ill, and if the patient is too feeble the doctor does the dances himself.
