Junior College Will Open Next Week In County

Boiling Springs President Anticipates Good Year At Baptist School.

Boiling Springs gets underway for its second year as a college next week and the new junior college for Cleveland county is optimistic in its outlook for the school year.

A statement issued by President J. B. Davis, in view of the opening, follows:

"With a half dozen faculty members and their families already on the campus, with numbers of students making application daily, houses and rooms give promise of being at a premium. As indications now assure, we should have an over flow student body, and an all-round college years unsurpassed in North Carolina with following unique features to encourage:

"First, the variety and scope of courses leading toward degrees in the arts, sciences, education, law, medicine, agriculture, home economics, expression, art and music, present a challenging curricular choice.

"Second, the personnel of the faculty should stir, to tall timber proportions, the pride of Western North Carolina educators—every department head: an M. A. graduate, or its equivalent; the special departments, piano, voice, expression, art, physical education are manned by Master graduates in their several fields and invite comparison with the best.

"Third, especial attention should be given to the teachers' certificate course in the education department, which is approved by the state board of education for full credits giving the elementary A, primary and grammar grade C, certificates, and which is destined to hasten the progress of 'pedagogizing the elementary schools throughout this great section.

"Fourth, these features, have found hearty approval of the education board which has filed with us its written approval of the work done last year and endorsement of all the plans and policies under which the school is to be operated this year, having already granted teachers' certificate to students last year who qualified under our program of study.

"Fifth, these five, but the greatest of these is the universal favor and wide-extended patronage that is coming to the school, to which the lovers of christian education throughout all western piedmont are going to send their sons and daughters whom they desire to have under junior college and adolescent-tending Christian education influences; and Boiling Springs college is the only junior college within reach of more than 3,000 of these fine, yearning hearted, hidden treasures in future world leadership, offering as it does, the first two years of college work (in addition to the four years of high school work) at a total cost, this year, of $260.00 per student per year."

110,000 STUDENTS IN HIGH SCHOOLS OF STATE LAST YEAR

Raleigh.—Approximately 110,000 boys and girls were enrolled in the public high schools of the state during the session just closed, it was learned today at the office of the state superintendent of public instruction from a summary of the figures taken from the reports of these high schools.

A total of 96,739, or 88 per cent of the 409,975, were white boys and girls. The remaining 13,236 were negro pupils, 3,779 in rural schools and 9,457 in city schools. More than 61,000 of the white children attended rural high schools, and over 35,000 attended city schools.

Five years ago, 1923-24, there were only 32,415 rural boys and girls and 26,369 city children, a total of 58,784 boys and girls, seeking a high school education. The large increase of 89 per cent in number of rural boys and girls taking advantage of the opportunity of a high school education indicates, according to school authorities, the holding power of the recently erected rural high schools. "Formerly," they say, "most rural boys and girls left the elementary school provided for them without seeking the advantages of a high school education, whereas now these same rural boys and girls in increasing numbers go on to the high schools provided for them."

This past year, there were 35,410 white children in the eighth grade, 26,333 in the ninth grade, 19,859 in the tenth grade, and 15,137 in the eleventh grade—a total of 96,739, or nearly 7,000 more than in 1923-24. Buncombe county leads the state in having the largest number of rural white boys and girls, 2,394, enrolled in public high schools. More than one-fourth of the rural white high school enrollment is in the following eleven counties: Buncombe, 2,394; Mecklenburg, 1,635; Johnston, 1,599; Union, 1,508; Guilford, 1,476; Rutherford, 1,451; Robeson, 1,308; Harnett, 1,159; and Forsyth, 1,131.

"Third, especial attention should be given to the teachers' certificate course in the education department, which is approved by the state board of education for full credits giving the elementary A, primary and grammar grade C, certificates, and which is destined to hasten the progress of 'pedagogizing the elementary schools throughout this great section.

"Fourth, these features, have found hearty approval of the education board which has filed with us its written approval of the work done last year and endorsement of all the plans and policies under which the school is to be operated this year, having already granted teachers' certificate to students last year who qualified under our program of study.
