HIGHER TAXES LIKELY IN ASHEVILLE AND BUNCOMBE

Asheville.—A total tax rate, city and county, will in excess of $3 on the $100 valuation, is indicated as compilation of taxables continues in the office of the county auditor.

Although figures are still too incomplete to permit of an estimate of what the new rates must be, it appears that the county rate must be advanced from $1.09 per $100, which prevailed last year, to at least $1.40. This is exclusive of the 51 cents for city schools, which hereafter will be collected by the county.

The city rate last year was $1.62 and with the 51 cent city school rate deducted would leave the city rate at $1.11, but it is expected that this rate too must be advanced to about $1.40. In case the city and county rates are each $1.40, with the 51 cent city school rate, the total levy for property owners in Asheville will be $3.31, as against $2.72 aggregate city and county, last year.

Sport Shorts In Shelby

and several other high school teams but it happened to be Sherrill Hamrick and Shelby high which won in Chapel Hill, and not Tom Gadd and Charlotte high. Anyway, young Gadd recently turned down a contract offered him by an International League club, which is right up next to the majors in baseball class. If Gadd has that opportunity now, think where Hamrick will go two or three years from now after he gets a bit more education and baseball experience?

This'n That.
By the way, any baseball fan who passes up this death struggle at the city park tomorrow afternoon between the Cleveland Cloth mill club and Eastside for the county league pennant will be missing the treat of the season.

Next Monday afternoon, after watching the Webbs and Goebel golf awhile, Coach Casey Morris is going to toot his whistle over on the high school gridiron and see just how many youngsters he will have to build the prospective Shelby high football eleven.

On October 11 the Carolina football eleven will play Georgia Tech in Atlanta, and on the following day, October 12, Yale and Georgia will play at Athens. Shelby football fans are already het up over the two big treats coming on successive days and have already chartered a Pullman car to take them to Atlanta for one game, then over to Athens for the other, and then back home. Reservations for the entire trip, Pullman and all, may be made with Vernon Proctor down at the Southern station, if you have something less than $20 and more than $15 to put up for your part.

And put this down, if the Webb boys beat Goebel, and either one of them turns in an individual card better than Goebel's, the Carolinas will just about have to sit back and admit that Shelby has the two leading golfers in the two states—and both of them mere kids—one 16 and the other 15. Don't miss that match!

More Webbs Coming.

While the Webb boys are having their day other golfers are being manufactured out on the Cleveland Springs course. This week a caddy tournament was staged among the bag-carriers ranging from nine to 16 years of age, and, if it will not offend the dignity of the grown-ups, we might say that better all-around golf was played than in the recent Kiwanis tourney between three cities. "Nibs" White, a husky youngster and one of the largest caddies on the course, won the tourney, but to do so he was forced to sink a 20-foot putt on the ninth green to eliminate little Frank Reid, who isn't more than an inch taller than an ordinary golf club.

An Embryo Leaguer.
Right often during the high school baseball season fans who watched Sherrill Hamrick hurl one victory after another for Shelby high asked each other "Reckon he's good enough to ever go up?" There is no doubt but what Hamrick is one of the best young pitchers hereabouts, and if he keeps moving and doesn't get it in the neck—and that isn't likely—his chances are good. They seem even more so now that a news item has come out of Charlotte about Tomm Gadd, young Charlotte high pitcher. Gadd is the youth who tried to defeat Shelby

CRIME IS COSTING A GIGANTIC SUM

Police School Speaker Urges More Attention To Crime Prevention.

Chapel Hill.—Quoting figures to show that crime cost the United States 12,933,000,000 in one year, recently, Judge J. R. Patton of Durham, declared before the University's police school here that "we get back to first causes the same as Pasteur did with medicine if we are to solve our crime problem."

"The Baumes law in New York, which carries a punishment of life imprisonment for any person convicted of four felonies," he declared, "is only getting at effects and not causes. Such severity of punishments only tends to drive criminals to neighboring states with less rigorous laws and does not lessen the problem at all. We must get back to the underlying causes."

Urges Crime Prevention.

"The crime problem," Judge Patton said, "will be remedied only by eliminating causes and raising the general standards of the criminal class by the influence of the family, school, church and other social agencies. We need to spend more money preventing crime, and we would have to spend less correcting crime. There will always be a certain amount, and severity of punishment isn't going to help. Swift, sureness and implacability of justice, and the ability and agility of officers in ferreting out offenders is the thing that will count."

Dr. Lee M. Brooks of the University sociology department, who was one of the first to conceive the idea of the police school, emphasized that the police, "too long a mere political force," are a social force also and are achieving noteworthy results in localities over the country, preventing crime as well as apprehending criminals. Preventive work must start with the defective or delinquent child, and here the policeman on his beat has a wonderful opportunity, he pointed out.

"Theory and practice go hand in hand," Dr. Brooks declared, telling the police that they needed the best possible training in their work.

Preventive work must start with the defective or delinquent child, and here the policeman on his beat has a wonderful opportunity, he pointed out.

"Theory and practice go hand in hand," Dr. Brooks declared, telling the police that they needed the best possible training in their work.

Dr. Brooks pointed to the disastrous Chicago riot of 1919 as the direct result of unskilled, tactless police and against this the Larry Newsom case of Goldsboro two years ago when a North Carolina sheriff's tactfulness, fearlessness and common sense averted just such an occurrence.

Els H. Parker, chief of detectives in Burlington county, N. J., who has the unparalleled record of having handled more than 150 murder cases, with only five actual killings, was another speaker advising the officers on high lights of investigations and illustrating with cases he had handled.

Prof. E. J. Woodhouse of the university continued his series of lectures on government, and the officers concluded a hard day's study program with courses in first aid and physical training.

Two registered Jersey cows from the Shuford herd in Catawba county were purchased by the Crossnore School in Avery county this month.
