Life Work Of Veteran County Minister

(By W. R. Ware, in North Carolina Christian Advocate.)

About the year 1877 or '78 Brother Hoyle was serving Cherry Mountain mission as a supply. The Shelby district conference met in Rutherford. Brother Hoyle was put up to preach early in the conference. He was dressed in homespun clothes and brogan shoes. The people wondered why the "elder" should ask such a backwoods looking preacher in the county seat. The sermon made a deep impression that he was requested to preach again at this conference, and the house was crowded eager to hear him.

Not far from the same time Brother Hoyle preached at Providence church near what is now Henrietta. A cultured young gentleman, a school teacher, was in the congregation. He was accustomed to note the names of preachers he heard, their texts, and the outlines of their sermons. When Brother Hoyle arose to preach, this young man started to follow his custom, but got no further than the name of the preacher and his text, because so attracted by the uniqueness of the preacher and the great thoughts presented that he forgot his pencil and notebook. This gentleman is now living in Rutherford and remembers that sermon and text to this day. 52 years ago.

"Uncle" Geo. W. Ivey is quoted as saying while he was traveling the Rutherford circuit and Brother Hoyle was the presiding elder, that he could get more out of a text than any man he even heard preach.

While serving the Davidson circuit with 13 appointments, he had a collision with a "singing school" and its teacher. The church grounds were covered with wagons, buggies and people when the preacher appeared on the scene. He went in. The house was filled with folks. Brother Hoyle announced some of the most familiar hymns in the Methodist hymn book. The teacher and his "trained class" were confused—couldn't sing them. Brother Hoyle said, "I'll sing them myself; for I could then sing anything in the book." After dinner in the grove, he and the people went in for a second service. He selected two of the longest hymns in our hymn book, one by Isaac Watts, the other by Charles Wesley. He "lined them out," as was the custom in our churches, raised the tune, and sang both hymns through by himself. After the sermon he announced: "I'll be back here the fourth Sunday in August to sing and preach again." He had no further trouble with the professional "singing school teacher" on that circuit.

Near another church on the same circuit there was a liquor distillery run by a Mr. Baker. He was preaching a given Sunday against the evils of liquor and referred to this still as such a nasty place that his horse would not drink from the branch that ran across the road below it. Baker heard of his remarks, and threatened to whip Brother Hoyle the next time he saw him. Soon after the threat Brother Hoyle with his son, Caleb (then a small boy) met Mr. Baker in the road. He spoke to Mr. Baker, stopped his horse, got out of the buggy and said to Mr. Baker that he had heard he had said "the next time you saw me you were going to whip me. Let's have that over now Mr. Baker, and it will be behind us." Mr. Baker said, "Who told you that?" Brother Hoyle said, "Nels Bass, one of your neighbors." Well, Mr. Hoyle, I did not mean it." Brother Hoyle proposed that they shake hands. They did. Brother Hoyle said, "Let me get down here and pray for you." They knelt in the big road and prayed. "I had rather you had whipped me. I'm coming to hear you preach."

Last Months Of Life.

That which caused his death was cancer of the mouth. His son Caleb was with him constantly day and night for six months. He suffered greatly with increasing pain to the last. His more quiet moments were in the after part of the night. He was always an early riser, usually ate breakfast and conducted family prayers before day in the winter season. For weeks before he died he would have Caleb to sing the old familiar hymns of Methodism to him between midnight and day, call the family together and he would pray with and for them.

A week or two before he passed he prayed something like this: "Father, if it be thy will relieve me of this suffering. This old cancer gives me so much pain. I don't want to hurry you, Father, but I will be glad when it is all over." Then he said, "I do not know just what I'll meet when I get there, and won't know just what to do; but you will be there and will tell me what to do and how to do it, and that will be all right."

Some three or four mornings before he died, after the usual family worship, with no one in the room with him but Caleb, he said to him, "The room is filled with shining ones. Don't you see them? They are here"—naming Bishop Kilgo, Tom Fulton of Kings Mountain, Colin Hull of Shelby, O. F. Ford of Shelby and Dr. C. W. Byrd, all special and dear friends of his. Caleb said to him, "O pa, your imagination is running pretty high. You are mistaken. There is nobody in the room." He said, "But they are; they are right here."

The next day he said to Caleb "Son, you thought I did not know what I was talking about yesterday morning when I told you I saw the brethren I then named, but I did know. I saw them. They were here, and I knew them." And brethren I believe he saw them. I believe he saw them. I believe those dear friends whose names he called were right there in the room with him.

In my early boyhood Dr. John W. North preached in and about Shelby for a number of years, serving the station, circuit and district. He was at my father's home very often. His oldest daughter was named Janie. He baptized her in infancy. She was converted and joined the church under his ministry. He married her to her husband, Mr. Prongbarger. She died with a lingering illness in her father's home. He conducted her funeral. A little while before she died she said to the family in her room: "The room is full of shining ones. Don't you all see them? They are here. Father, there is my mother. She has come for me. Don't you see her? She is here." Her father related this incident in her funeral and got shouting happy relating it.

The general conference met in Nashville, Tenn., in 1882. I was a student at Vanderbilt university. Bishops Wilson, Granberry, Parker and Hargrove were elected to this high office at this conference. Bishop H. H. Kavanaugh preached the ordination sermon when these four were ordained. In his peroration he described in his unsurpassable eloquence the glorious experiences God gave some of his children just before taking them unto himself, a glimpse in to the glory world where they were soon to go. It was not delirium, from weakness nor from medicine, the good bishop said, but a blessed privilege our Father sometimes gives his children in the final struggle and victory over the last enemy—strength for their triumphant and glorious passing. This experience the good bishop said is also given to strengthen the faith and to encourage the bereft friend to strive to make sure the same blessed port whither their loved ones are entering.

This great sermon made a profound impression on my young mind and heart. I believe what Bishop Kavanaugh then said. I believe Dr. North's daughter Janie saw those she said she saw and had come for her. I believe our good Brother Hoyle saw Bishop Kilgo, Dr. Byrd, and those good laymen whom he named, Brothers Fulton, Ford and Hull.

A like experience may not be granted the writer of these incidents, nor to any who may read them; but may it please our heavenly Father to use this testimony to encourage the reader and the writer, and to strengthen our faith for a complete and final victory over the last enemy whom our Christ stands pledged to destroy.
