A soldier at the fort saw the plane crash, dragged Molloy from the wreckage and took him to the army hospital at Fort McPherson. It was Mol'oy's first accident on the mail line.
